Rabbits and Aldabaran.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HODGE, Cal., Aug. 22.

PLEASANT DAY here, on the Mohave Desert, temperature 104 in the shade, but not disagreeable, thanks to a breeze blowing steadily from the Pacific, 60 miles to the west.

Quite cold in the night, one thin blanket not enough. Cold nights, and in the daytime men sunburned as dark as Indians, working with no clothing above the waists, with heat from 102 to 112—an interesting contrast.

SATURDAY NIGHT, youth, led by Howard Hill, the champion young archer from Opalocka, Fla., went out to hunt jackrabbits with spotlights and bows and arrows.

The rabbits stop for a second, huge ears erect, when the light falls upon them, and the rabbit mortality is not high.

The young men take turns, one runs the car, another, sitting on the far end of the mudguard, does the shooting, holding his balance with one leg curled around a lamp.

Criminal rabbits that have burrowed under the fence into the alfalfa lands, their idea of Heaven, come down to the fence, but its close weaving makes the arrow useless.

You might send dogs after them, but dogs and rabbits would make paths in the green velvet of the alfalfa, more harmful than the rabbit's moderate eating.

IF JACKRABBITS dodging spotlights and arrows do not interest you, you may look off to a great three-cornered; red moon, rising over the mountain, or up where the Milky Way makes a path of brilliant white, and the bigger stars and planets stand out on a blue black sky.

Some of those suns are one million times as big as our own and our sun is a million times as big as this earth. So nothing is big, nothing is little, and perhaps a dodging jackrabbit is as important as Aldabaran, or even Orion's giant nebula.

AT FOUR O'CLOCK in the morning, the alfalfa bailing machine is at work, outside your window, men with pitchforks feeding it, while the gas engine chugs.

Big horses, at the word of command, move the bailer just the right distance to the next pile of hay with the night dew still on it, which makes the perfect hay. One set of nimble fingers attend to the wires that hold the bales together. Women can do that.

It is Sunday, but hay must be baled when it is ready. Would you enjoy working at four in the morning and later, in the day's full heat, raising alfalfa to sell at eight or nine dollars a ton for the highest grade?

THERE IS other news, although it seems distant here.

Gov. Roosevelt discovers that our troubles are due to President Hoover.

He, the President, encouraged stock gambling, then kept the facts to himself when the depression came. Gov. Roosevelt has seven remedies, read them.

Gov. Roosevelt proposes, if elected, to have government regulation of Wall street. This will make Wall street more than ever anxious to put up prices and persuade the voters that bad times are over since stocks are going up.

Unfortunately for these election plans, about ten million Americans will not believe that bad times are over until they get jobs. As long as you can hire all the men you want for fifteen cents an hour, some will believe that bad times are not ended.

GOV. ROLPH of California will not abandon his soldier bonus suggestion, although high finance tells him he is wrong. He would give soldiers of California bonds of this state guaranteed by California, in exchange for their bonus certificates.

When the certificates come due, California would collect from Uncle Sam. The soldiers, easily selling their tax-exempt California bonds, would have the money to spend now, when they need it.

Bonus certificates are not negotiable and that might interfere. But there is no doubt that payment of the bonus NOW would do more to end this depression than anything else could do. Distribution of two and a quarter billion dollars in every corner of the United States would REVIVE BUSINESS, put men to work, start factories going.

AND THE GOVERNMENT need not beg or borrow the money, or fear inflation. It could print the money and issue it, no interest to pay. Its gold supply is ample, its credit is good. As well talk of a flood, when you irrigate these alfalfa fields, as talk about inflation, if money were distributed evenly in every corner, every store, theater, factory in the country.

However, our high finance geniuses, that have just proved their intelligence by throwing away billions of private dollars in Europe and South America, say NO and therefore the bonus will not be paid, although its payments would benefit them, more than others.

They fight that now as they once fought the Federal Reserve Bank proposition. And without that Federal Reserve, this country would recently have gone through such a black panic as the world never saw.

THE GOVERNMENT is dumping its billions into financial institutions, lending to great corporations sums up to one hundred millions, hoping that the money, in some mysterious way, will seep out and reach the peoples' pockets.

That's as foolish as though the sixty thousand gallons of Moore conducted a horse-shoeing shop in Oakland years ago and later was engaged in the transfer business, police said. He was a director of the Oakland Board of Trade. He was a devotee of horse racing and had followed the sport for years.

Police reported they learned that Moore had been in ill health and financial straits.

MOLLISON WILL FLY HOME

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Sandy-haired Capt. James A. Mollison, the only human ever to fly alone from Europe to New York, today hoped the weather man would let him start his hop home to England in two or three days. He explained:

"I've just been married, you know.

When he finished his precedent-shattering jaunt from Europe at 4:33 p. m., Pittsburgh time, yesterday, Mollison, who is the husband of Amy Johnson, England's most famous woman flier, said:

"Amy and I have made a pact to make no more extremely long or hazardous trips, once this flight is concluded."

Mollison was in the air 36 hours and one minute between Port Marnock, Ireland, and New York. He brought his tiny plane, "Heart's Content," down before 2,000 cheering fans at Roosevelt Field. He had made the leg from St. John's, N. B., in five hours, 12 minutes.

PENNFIELD RIDGE, N. B., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Prosperity came to farmer Jim Armstrong on the wings of Capt. J. A. Mollison's trans-Atlantic plane. Armstrong, owner of the field on which the "Heart's Content" landed, charged motorists a 50-cent fee to see the takeoff and he filled his pockets with coins.

Poll Shows Roosevelt Inroads on G. O. P.

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(Univeral.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, is making tremendous inroads into the ranks of those who four years ago supported the Republican ticket, President Hoover, on the other hand, is cutting only slightly into the 1928 Democratic ranks.

This is disclosed in the first analysis of the party vote from returns in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Of the 64,850 ballots thus far tabulated, Gov. Roosevelt has received 41,640 and President Hoover 23,210, a 64-36 per cent advantage for the Democratic candidate.

Ninety-two per cent of those sending in Roosevelt ballots indicated thereon the party they supported in 1928, while 95 per cent of the Hoover backers set forth their stand four years ago.

The Roosevelt supporters divided 22,710 or 55 per cent, voting Democratic in 1928, and 15,417 or 37 per cent, who went Republican in the last election. The other 3,513 now favoring Roosevelt were non-committal on their past stand.

The Hoover supporters divided 21,059, or 91 per cent, as having

HINT WALKER WILL DEFY OUSTER

Denied Fair Trial by Roosevelt, Counsel Charges in Court

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—A broad hint that Mayor James J. Walker will refuse to vacate his office if he is ordered removed by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt was made in Supreme Court today by John J. Curtin, the Mayor's counsel, in arguing before Justice Ellis J. Staley in behalf of a writ restraining the Governor from proceeding in the Walker case.

After Curtin had vigorously declared the Governor had no jurisdiction: that he had denied Mayor Walker a fair trial; that he had accepted the Hofstadter "ex-parte" testimony as evidence and that the Mayor has not been accorded the right to face his accusers, he said:

"A physical conflict might well ensue if an order were made by the Governor to remove the Mayor without jurisdiction."

CLASH ON JURISDICTION

Curtin told Justice Staley that Gov. Roosevelt is "not above the law." He asserted that "we intend to protect the Mayor of our greatest city in the courts."

Henry Epstein, Assistant Attorney General, spoke in behalf of Gov. Roosevelt. He said:

"Gov. Roosevelt has full jurisdiction. It is not a judicial proceeding before the Governor. It is an executive proceeding.

Speaking Mischievously Without Carrying a Stick

PRESIDENT HOOVER is not disposed to let his Secretary of State enjoy the credit—the very dubious credit—of being the originator of the so-called "Stimson doctrine."

The law of the Kellogg Pact—the meddler's law—which, according to Secretary Stimson, imposes an affirmative duty upon us to interfere in every controversy between nations anywhere in the world, is not the Stimson doctrine after all. IT IS THE HOOVER DOCTRINE.

"I have projected," said President Hoover in his acceptance speech, "a new doctrine into international affairs, the doctrine that we do not and never will recognize title to or possession of territory gained in violation of the peace pacts which were signed with us."

The President claims to have gone beyond the Kellogg Pact and to have "transformed it from an inspiring outlawry of war to an organized instrument . . . against aggression."

MAKING SURE THAT no imbroglio in the world can escape our intervention, President Hoover says:

"We shall under the spirit of that pact consult with other nations in times of emergency to promote world peace."

Thus does the President not only affirm his leaning to the poisonous creed of internationalism, but he carries internationalism itself to an extreme which it has never before reached.

Alarming as this is it becomes more so as one notes the further trend of Mr. Hoover's thought.

He links the new policy of universal meddling with an exposition of what he is doing for disarmament.

"We inaugurated the London naval treaty which reduced armaments and limited the ratios between the fleets of the three powers," says the President.

He does not, however, add that the London naval treaty did not satisfy his passion for disarmament. He does not say that we alone, unaccompanied by similar action on the part of rival powers, ignored the treaty ratios and permitted our own naval strength to drop far beneath the permitted quotas.

"WE HAVE MADE concrete proposals at Geneva to reduce the armaments of the world by one-third," says the President.

But he does not tell us that these proposals received only the scantest attention, producing hardly a ripple at the Geneva conference and not halting for a moment the European race for armament.

Thus, as our defenses crumble and our strength declines, we elect to stand forth as the WORLD'S GREAT PROVACATEUR, inviting its RESENTMENTS, taking sides in disputes that do not affect us, SCORNING THE SAFE ROLE OF NEUTRALITY in wars that do not involve our interests, and COURTING THE DANGER of being classified and TREATED AS A BELLIGERENT BY POWERS WHICH, but for our gratuitous interventions, WOULD BE FRIENDLY.

THIS IS HEADY, dangerous stuff!

It behooves a nation that essays such a meddler's role to look to its strength and to its defenses—not to neglect them.

But the President, insensible to what his course involves, proceeds with his fatuous "economy program" of skimping the Army and starving the Navy, when every word he utters and every step he takes in the field of foreign policy, make both branches of our armed forces increasingly vital to the nation's safety.

What is this "inspiring outlawry of war" of which Mr. Hoover prates?

We had a sample of it a few months ago in the sudden onslaught by Japan, a signatory of the Kel-

TRIGGER MAN IDENTIFIED BY GIRL

'Trade Mark' of Murder Ring on Bodies of Brooklyn Victims

Meanwhile New York detectives linked two more murders at Harrison, N. J., to the national murder syndicate blamed for the death of John Bazzano, Pittsburgh racket leader.

BLONDE WITNESS

Spinelli, suspected in other racket murders, was charged not only with the murder of Johnny Volpe, but of his massacred brothers, Arthur and Jim, in an information sworn to by Ferris today in Central Police Court.

Ferris said a young blonde who lives in the Hill district saw Spinelli fire several shots into Johnny at the Bazzano coffee shop, 704 Wylie avenue, three weeks ago.

Capt. McGowan, of the Brooklyn Homicide Squad, telephoned Lieut. Ferris this afternoon that a grand jury in Brooklyn will be asked to indict Spinelli for the murder of Bazzano.

Ferris said he had learned that Spinelli was one of two men who

WASHINGTON POLICE STORY ATTACKED

Double Investigation Into Shooting of Merchant Begun

By CHARLES A. EARLY
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 22.—A thorough investigation of the fatal shooting of C. E. Bittner, 26, manager of the McCrory 5-and-10-cent store, here yesterday by Patrolman John Cochran while the victim was allegedly resisting arrest on a disorderly conduct charge, was started today by Coroner William Baker and the District Attorney's office.

Cochran fired two shots into Bittner's body in the presence of several eye-witnesses in front of the Washington County Courthouse, when Bittner made a move, witnesses said, as if to reach for a gun.

GUN CHARGE

County Detective Frank Creps said last night a 25-caliber automatic pistol was found in Bittner's pocket at Washington Hospital, where he died a few minutes after being admitted. Cochran is being held pending action by the Coroner. Date for an inquest has not been set, Coroner Baker said last night.

Complete investigation into the shooting was deemed advisable by the District Attorney, it was pointed out, because of conflicting stories told by witnesses and the assertion of relatives that Bittner never carried a gun.

ARGUES WITH OFFICER

Bittner, police declared, objected to the officer's remarks when taken into custody. He continued arguing with the officer while walking toward the police station. In front of the courthouse he raised his hand in argument. It was this gesture that prompted the officer to pull his gun and fire, believing that the man was preparing to shoot, according to police.

Prominent in business affairs here, Bittner had been manager of the McCrory store for two years. He was born in Connellsville, Pa., where funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon. Burial will be in Hill Grove Cemetery there.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lydia Mae Bittner and a 4-year-old daughter, Dolores; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Bittner, of Connellsville, and a sister and two brothers.

Declares Fighters Alone Want Peace

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Col. Edgar White, president of "Fidac," at a convention of war veterans yesterday declared that only former combatants earnestly desired to settle future controversies peacefully.

He qualified his statement, however, with the remark that no nation could wholly disarm without a guarantee of full security.

Bankruptcy Asked In Two Petitions

John H. Calhoun, of Dayton, Armstrong county, an inspector of weights and measures, today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in Federal Court. He listed liabilities of $6,185 and assets of $1,550. The Hebeler Auto Company of New Kensington also filed a petition in bankruptcy, a schedule of liabilities and assets to be filed later.

34 Bodies of Ship Victims Still Sought

South Trimble, clerk of the House of Representatives. The matter of whether the corporation's loans should be made public has been the subject of controversy. The administration opposed publicity, while Speaker Garner, of the House, insisted that the loans should be made known.

Trimble said that shortly before he had planned to announce his decision to make the individual loans public, he received a telephone call "from a high official in the administration" who told him his decision "was contrary to the wishes of the President, and was not authorized by law."

Trimble took exception to a statement by Representative conferee on the relief bill, that his decision to make public the reports was to gain favor with Speaker John N. Garner.

POMERENE'S REPORT

Trimble's report of the corporation was accompanied by a letter signed by Chairman Atlee Pomerene showing that 437 loans otaling $45,057,556 had been made during the 10-day period of July, and increases in loans authorized prior to July 21 had total $1,653,500.

The letter said of the total amount loaned, $32,990,180 was authorized to banks and trust companies, including $284,900 to aid in the reorganization of closed banks; $104,309 to agriculture credit corporations; $3,088,650 to building and loan associations; $2,247,500 to insurance companies; $90,000 to a joint stock land bank; $580,716 to livestock credit corporations; $747,000 to mortgage loan companies, and $6,862,700 to railroads.

LACKAYE, STAR OF STAGE, DIES

Lackaye, a towering personality who for nearly 40 years made his force felt on and off the American stage, succumbed to a heart ailment after illness had kept him in "involuntary retirement" for most of five years.

The list of his roles occupies several columns in "Who's Who in the Theater," but it was his Svengali role in "Trilby," from Du Maurier's famous novel of the Paris studios, that was the cornerstone of his national distinction. He was a romantic actor and he survived as a link between what old-timers call the "palmy days" and the present.

Lackaye was famous for occasional truculence. Broadway still talks about a difference of opinion between him and John J. McGraw, former leader of the New York Giants, during which Lackaye was thrown downstairs and suffered a fracture of the ankle. McGraw, denying that he did the throwing, was suspended from the Lambs Club for a while after the incident.

LIBBY TO SHARE IN REYNOLDS FORTUNE

Slain Heir's Widow To Gain Wealth By Baby's Birth

By FULTON LEWIS
Universal Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 22.—Libby Holman Reynolds' baby will enable her to receive nearly $200,000 a year from the vast Reynolds estate, even though she probably will not receive a direct share of the tobacco millions, it developed here today.

While authorities continued their wait for the return of Smith Reynold's 26-year-old brother, Richard, it was disclosed that the "torch" singing Libby can, through her now famous baby-to-be, sidestep the apparent barriers to a share in the wealth of her slain husband's family.

INCOME FOR LIBBY

Lawyers close to the Reynolds family admitted that Libby can establish her residence outside the state of North Carolina, and have herself appointed guardian for her child when it arrives, and, until the child is of age, would be entitled to handle all its funds, receiving a 5 per cent commission on all income and disbursements.

They estimated that such commissions would total, conservatively, $175,000 a year, and in prosperous times would probably be far in excess of $200,000. The baby would receive a full share in the income of the Reynolds estate.

Leading attorneys here believe that despite the North Corolina statute prohibiting a wife from receiving any share of her husband's estate when she has been convicted of having any connection with his death, that Libby would not be barred from receiving a guardian's commission regardless of the outcome of her trial for Smith Reynolds' murder.

FAMILY WILL FIGHT

In the event she is acquitted and attempts to make a fight for a direct share of the estate, the Reynolds clan will put up a vigorous battle in the courts, a member of the family said.

Richard Reynolds arrived in Miami by plane from Havana late yesterday, according to an official of the Pan-American Airways.

According to the same authority, Reynolds traveled under an assumed name and was whisked away in an automobile to an unknown destination.

50,000 Italian Troops Begin Mock Warfare

PERUGIA, Italy, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Twenty-five thousand invading "Reds" were advancing from the northeast today in an attempt to force the Scheggia Pass leading to Rome as the opening phase of army maneuvers. Meanwhile the same number of defending "Blues" on the other side of the pass deployed to meet them.

Premier Mussolini was expected at the "battlefield."

BENN RETURNS, SPURNS QUIZ

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—After several weeks of travel in Europe, James S. Benn was back in Philadelphia today for his battle with Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

The former member of the Public Service Commission, accused by the Governor of banking $650,000 during the decade he served the state, arrived yesterday in New York. He was met by Mrs. Benn, their son, James S. Benn, Jr., and John P. Connelly, attorney, who also was attorney for W. D. B. Ainey, former chairman of the commission. Benn said:

"I will have nothing to say at this time on any matter about anyone."

VOLPE MURDER CHARGED TO SPINELLI

INDICTMENTS SOUGHT

In October of last year Spinelli was indicted—but never apprehended—in the racket murders of Jack Palmere and Sam (Toto) Amarosa.

Homicide Detectives Frank Dodson and Al Grayber were credited with finding the young blonde witness. Her name was being withheld to thwart any possible underworld attempts to silence her.

Lieut. Ferris said he would ask District Attorney Andrew T. Park to have Spinelli indicted for the Volpe killings immediately.

Two New Killings Linked To Bazzano Murder Ring

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—The "trade mark" of the national murder syndicate that killed John Bazzano, of Pittsburgh, today linked two murders of Brooklyn gangsters in Harrison, N. J., to the inter-city gangster war that caused Bazzano's death two weeks ago.

The newest victims are Andrew Fadrizio and Vincent Boccio, alias Joseph Dimalo, both of Brooklyn and each 26 years old.

They were found behind a garage trussed up so that their knees were under their chins—as Bazzano had been tied.

PAIR GARROTTED

Their necks were circled with rope, guaranteeing strangulation if other causes failed—just as Bazzano had been garrotted.

Their heads had been beaten with hammers or pistol butts until their skulls had been fractured—as Bazzano's head had been crushed.

Their bodies were stabbed through and through with some thin blade, like an ice pick or stiletto—as Bazzano had been stabbed.

Finally each body was wrapped in burlap sacking and tied in a bundle with heavy cord—as the Bazzano "package" had been "wrapped."

Capt. John McGowan, of the Brooklyn homicide squad, said:

"Gangster killings have a technique, each peculiar to itself. The similarities in the wounds, wrapping and body positions of the Harrison victims and of Bazzano are too near alike to be mere coincidence."

KILLED IN BROOKLYN

McGowan is satisfied that the two new victims were killed in Brooklyn and then taken by auto, either through the Holland tunnel or by ferry to the point where their bodies were finally tossed out of the murder car.

Both victims had prison and police records and both were at liberty on $5,000 bail. Both have been on the Brooklyn suspect list, as are all those members of the underworld who once took orders from the murdered Frankie Yale.

Their bodies were found shortly after 8 a. m. yesterday by Peter Wozniak, who lives about a hundred feet from the Harrison turnpike, at Harrison.

That autopsy definitely determined that the two murder victims had been tortured, subjected to excruciating pain, before they were finally put to death.

Their fingers had been beaten with hammers or gun butts. Their bodies were a mass of bruises, and their faces had been battered almost beyond recognition."

The torture evidence led Detective Louis Ramirez and Capt. McGowan to link the new murders still more closely with the killing of Bazzano.

VENGEANCE PLOT

Their theory was that the roundup of 14 Brooklyn and out-of-town men as suspects in the Bazzano murder—with subsequent dismissal of the homicide charges in court—had led to a vengeance plot by the Bazzano killers.

Reports that the 14 men, including four Pittsburghers, who were discharged as suspects in the Bazzano murder, were to be rearrested were strongly denied today by Capt. McGowan. Although nine are still being held as public enemies, he admitted he had not linked them with the murders.

In their investigation of the murders police said the two victims may have been followers of "Little Augie" Pisano. They also considered the possibility that the slayings yesterday had their inception in the gang war which broke out when the powerful Volpe clan of Pennsylvania, headed by the three Volpe brothers, was reported to have "welched" to a Brooklyn liquor outfit on a $50,000 liquor bill.

WAR, INSTEAD OF being outlawed, seems to have experienced a rebirth. It rent the Lilliputian bonds of the Kellogg Pact as if they were tissue paper.

And it will do so again, when and as often as the urge of interest, policy or fear shall gain ascendancy over the reason and the will of a nation.

One of the well-remembered sayings of the late President Roosevelt was, "SPEAK SOFTLY, BUT CARRY A BIG STICK."

Mr. Hoover has made a dangerous departure from both these admonitions.

HE SPEAKS MISCHIEVOUSLY AND IN A HIGH PITCH, BUT DOESN'T CARRY ANY STICK, AT ALL.

ACTRESS-BRIDE ACCUSES OFFICER AS ASSAILANT

ROOSEVELT'S WALL STREET STAND HAILED

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

While the Governor has not made public any of the messages, it was learned that many of them praise his "courage" for taking such a stand, particularly at a time when an effort is being made to raise $1,500,000 to finance the Democratic presidential campaign.

Gov. Roosevelt made it plain he is not worried over reports that his proposal for regulation of stock and commodity markets may cause financial interests to refuse to contribute to the compaign fund.

Roosevelt is expected to reply to President Hoover on prohibition in his speech at a Democrat rally at Seagirt, N. J., next Saturday.

State Department Scores Roosevelt Loan Charge

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Though President Hoover has ignored the Columbus speech of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, that portion of the address dealing with the sale of foreign bonds, now almost worthless, was assailed by the State Department over the week-end.

The State Department declared: "This is an insinuation that the department has thus assisted the bankers in the past. The Department of State has never approved a single loan."

BROADWAY GIRL ATTACKED IN PANAMA

U. S. Envoy Demands Speedy Prosecution, Suspect Grilled

Universal Service.

COLON, Panama, Aug. 22.—With one suspect under arrest, United States Minister Roy T. Davis today demanded rigorous prosecution of the assailants of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Chandler, 22-year-old former Broadway vaudeville artist, who was lured from her home by two men identifying themselves as Panama policemen, and then attacked.

Detectives today continued their questioning of Policeman Pedro Espinosa, whom Mrs. Chandler identified as one of her attackers.

BRIDE ACCUSES OFFICER

The victim, bride of John J. Chandler, of Seattle, Wash., an aviation mechanic at France Field, picked Espinosa out of a lineup of police Saturday night. He was immediately arrested by his commander, Capt. Vicente Alvarado.

Up until his identification, police had insisted that Mrs. Chandler's assailants could not have been members of the force but must have been men using the uniform as disguise.

Mrs. Chandler was awakened in her home Friday night by the two men who said she was under arrest and commanded her to accompany them. Protesting their action, she dressed and was led to a deserted shack where they gagged, bound and mistreated her.

STRUGGLES FREE

Unable to call for help and almost unconscious, Mrs. Chandler lay in the shack for several hours until she managed to struggle free of her bonds and stagger home.

Mrs. Chandler, known on the stage as "Betty Andrews," came to the Isthmus July 23 from New York. She was under contract to sing at the Atlantic Night Club in Colon. A short time afterward she met Chandler and they were married at a Cristobal magistrate's office.

DENIES POISON FATAL IN 'PLOT'

Dr. T. R. Helmbold, coroner's physician, testified at the resumption of the inquest in the so-called Munhall poison plot case today, that a trace of poison found in the body of Andrew Allas, 16, one of the four supposed victims, was not a contributory cause of death, which he attributed to acute bronchial pneumonia.

Dr. Helmbold and Dr. W. J. McMeans, also a coroner's physician, had conducted an autopsy on the exhumed body of the youth.

The nature of the poison found by analysis of the exhumed bodies was revealed by County Chemist F. C. Buckmaster today as tin salts, a drug having wide commercial use. Only 80 one-hundredths of a grain was found in Andrew Allas' body, Buckmaster disclosed.

The other reputed victims were Stephen Allas, 12, in whose body 74 grains of the drug were found, according to Buckmaster; Joseph Mantyo and Richard Duyva, aged 1 year.

Mrs. Anna Allas and Mrs. Mary Chalfa are held on murder charges in connection with the case. Their arrest followed an alleged "confession" by Mrs. Gizella Young.

Weather to Be Good For Sun's Eclipse

CONWAY, N. H., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Only one barrier loomed today in an otherwise perfect setting for nature's coming "show of shows"—the total eclipse of the sun—and that was the weather.

However, meteorologists came to the front today with the assurance of a better than 70 per cent of a perfect afternoon on August 31, when the sun and moon do their "act."

Man Killed, 1 Hurt In Hobo Camp Feud

DOVER, N. J., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Joseph F. Kennedy, 19, of California, was fatally stabbed, and John Moran, of Scranton, Pa., was critically wounded today in what police described as a flareup in a feud between rival camps of white and Negro hoboes.

Bank of England Head at Bar Harbor

WALKER OUSTER MAY BE DEFIED

Justice Staley reserved decision. He asked both sides to submit briefs. Curtin asked for time, saying the hearing before the Governor was keeping him very busy. The judge granted him until Wednesday to submit his brief.

DENOUNCES PROCEDURE

Curtin contended that under the state constitution, the Governor has no legal right to act on the question of removing the Mayor. He asserted:

"All power in this country is vested in the people.

"If any official assumes to act without jurisdiction, even though he occupy a high place, and we cannot seek recourse in the courts, then I say we are in a bad way.

Curtin launched into a denunciation of the manner in which the hearing before Gov. Roosevelt is being conducted. He asked:

"What does 'opportunity to be heard' mean?

"The Governor, in passing on the charges filed against the Mayor, ruled that he would accept as evidence the 'dead' record of the Hofstadter Committee. And that record is accepted as evidence against us.

"Even in a summary court-martial, the soldier, who may be shot within an hour, has the right to face his accusers.

"What we ask over there (before the Governor) and what we ask here now is fair play."

ATTACKS TESTIMONY

Declaring that the Hofstadter Committee testimony has "no more legal standing than a backfence whisper," Curtin urged Justice Staley to decide that the Governor has no right to accept such testimony as evidence. He said:

"Gov. Roosevelt must give us the right to confront witnesses. He seems to be setting up a new rule in our case and that is the reason why we come to the courts. He can't acquire a jurisdiction that does not exist."

"He seems to take the position that a man has no private right if he is a public official. That may be true in some places but it isn't true in a court room.

"If the Governor is going to remove a man it must be for betrayal of public trust. He is going into things that have no basis in law. He is trying to make the Mayor account for money which another man placed in a bank. What law permits him to do that? The answer is that there is none.

ALL DAY PLEA

Curtin declared today's court session might necessitate postponement of the Governor's hearing. But the Governor let it be known he may hold a night session.

Meanwhile, according to word issuing from the executive mansion, Gov. Roosevelt will not permit the injection of political matters at the removal hearings.

A number of state Republican leaders are scheduled to be summoned by Curtin. Both Curtin and Walker have declared they will prove that the Hoover administration instigated the investigation of Walker.

Lindbergh 'Suspect' Arrested in Phila.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A man who said he was Mark Miller, 38, was held under $1,000 bail "for investigation in connection with the Lindbergh case."

Miller was arrested when Patrolman Bozarth said he watched him climb fences and act suspiciously. In Miller's room, Bozarth said, he found clippings pertaining to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

DAVIS CHEERED BY MOOSE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Cancellation of dues owed by unemployed members was under consideration today by the conservation committee of the supreme council of the Loyal Order of Moose, as thousands of the lodgemen assembled here for the order's forty-fourth international convention.

United States Senator James J. Davis, director general of the organization, indicted at New York last week on a charge of aiding in the conducting of alleged lotteries by the Moose, attended the meetings of the council over the week-end and was given a demonstration of support by fellow-members.

Moose officials have asserted Davis had no personal connection with the alleged lotteries.

Falls Dead in Pulpit As Sermon Ends

Mrs. Thaden Protests Interruption of Bath

Demands Warning Before Visits to 'Flying Boudoir'

VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Mrs. Frances Marsalis and Mrs. Louise Thaden considered a plan today which might nullify their hard won endurance flight record.

With 190 hours in the air to their credit, a margin of 67 hours over the previous record, they took under consideration a suggestion that they fly to the national air show in Cleveland before landing.

The rules for endurance flights demand that the plane land at the same field from which it took off, so if the women fliers should be forced to land between here and Cleveland their more than a week in the air would all go for nothing and the old 123-hour record of Bobby Trout and Edna May Cooper would still stand.

Mrs. Marsalis and Mrs. Thaden dropped a note to Casey Jones, manager of Curtiss Field, reporting that their cold cream had run out in the "flying boudoir" and could something be done about it right away. Also Mrs. Thaden said she was suffering from hangnails.

Mrs. Thaden also requested that she be given an hour's warning today before the broadcasting plane went up to let a microphone down to the endurance fliers. She said:

"The broadcast plane interrupted my bath yesterday."

'VAMPIRE GIRL' HELD AS SPY

LYONS, France, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—"The vampire girl with the green eyes," as police know Miss Mina Kahn, pretty blonde, of German birth, was jailed here today pending an inquiry to determine whether she is a spy.

Police say they found 46 numbered letters, with certain words underlined, in her possession. They believed the underlined words formed a code.

The young woman has traveled widely and has many admirers. Among these is an Italian, also suspected of being a spy, whom she was believed to have met in Geneva.

Heart Disease Kills Youth in Police Chase

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(Universal.)—Police bullets left him unscathed, but heart disease, aggravated by fear of arrest, brought an end to a 20-year-old automobile thief here. He was Harold Schmalreide.

Halted after a chase of several miles, he and two companions crawled out of their stolen, overturned car and ran a block or two when the thief dropped.

DANCER TO WED JAILED ARTIST

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—Prison bars are not going to halt the marriage of Mamita Coleman Hayes, attractive Broadway dancer, and Herbert Formes, boyish Hollywood artist.

He is in and she is out, but they announced they would be married late today in the county jail, where Formes is being held on suspicion of robbery. They applied for a license Thursday.

Miss Hayes, 29, is the divorced wife of Henry P. Hayes, San Francisco business man. Formes, who is 23, met her in a Hollywood art studio six months ago and it was "love at first sight," he said. The dancer declared:

"He's my man and I'm going to stick by him. If he has to go to jail, I'll wait for him."

BAKERY BLAST INJURES THREE

A gas explosion wrecked the new bakery of L. L. Gaertner, 3911 Perrysville avenue, this morning, and injured three youths working in the place.

Frank, Anthony and John Boznik, of 1139 Voskamp street, were painting and cleaning in the bakery, which was to have been opened next Saturday, when an oven in the rear exploded, presumably from gas.

The blast tore off the iron doors of a brick oven in the rear of the store, blew out windows in the one-story brick storeroom and hurled merchandise from the shelves in a grocery and a drug store adjoining on either side.

Frank Boznik, 19, and his brother, Anthony, 21, suffering from cuts and bruises, were sent to St. John's Hospital. Their brother, John, 12, who had just arrived with their lunch when the explosion occurred, was suffering from shock.

Shriners to Arrive Home on Wednesday

The party will arrive in New York tomorrow night and depart immediately for Pittsburgh. James Barber, Shrine recorder, announced that all members of the party are well.

JAPAN WENT into Manchuria, spent money, and her finance minister confesses that she is now in a very bad financial crisis. Let US not criticize Japan. We went into Europe's war, head over heels, pocketbook and all.

We spent billions and sent billions, and when it was over, like a parcel of brilliant idiots, we lent dozens of other billions. That is costing us more than Manchuria will ever cost Japan.

BRITAIN'S TRADE conference at Ottawa ends, and tens of millions worth of goods that Canada used to buy from us every year, she will buy no more for the present. We cannot criticise the British and their dominions for endeavoring to establish free trade among themselves, as we have it among our forty-eight states.

ON THE OTHER hand, we buy every year from Canada more than the whole British empire buys from her. We may be able to transfer that buying to home producers.

If we do, Canada will congratulate us. In any case our total exports amount to only ten per cent of our total production, even in boom times. If all our people had all they want of everything the ten per cent exports would soon be absorbed.

Barrymore Clan Attends 'Prince's' Christening

PASADENA, Cal., Aug. 22.—(Universal.)—John Blyth Barrymore, 2-month-old crown prince of the royal theatrical family of Barrymore, was christened yesterday in St. Andrew's Catholic Church, here.

The Rev. James O'Shea, assistant pastor of Immaculate Heart Church in Hollywood and close friend of the family, baptized the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barrymore (Dolores Costello).

All of the Barrymores witnessed the ceremony, in which Helene Costello, the child's aunt, was godmother, and Lionel Barrymore, his uncle, was godfather, by proxy, in the absence of the playwright, Edward Sheldon, who was too ill to attend.

Others of the famous family assembled for the christening were Ethel Barrymore and her daughter and two sons, Ethel Barrymore Colt and Lionel and John Barrymore Colt, and Irene Fenwick, actress-wife of Lionel Barrymore.

Child Fearing Arrest In Candy Theft Flees

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—An 11-year-old Cleveland girl who ran away from home last Thursday because she thought she was to be arrested for taking a candy bar from a drugstore, was found last night in Erie, Pa., her mother was informed by police.

The girl, Betty Kamp, had hitch-hiked the entire distance.

Betty took alarm when the druggist told her to bring 5 cents from home or he would summon a policeman. Her mother was not home when Betty returned from the store, so the girl confided her problem to a chum.

The mother of the second girl went to Betty's home, but the child thought the knocking on the door meant a policeman was there. Taking 50 cents from her bank, the child fled.

MARINER ADRIFT 115 DAYS TELLS OF TERRORS

By CAPT. PAUL A. RIGGS

PORT SAN LUIS, Cal., Aug. 22.—Beans and Providence saved me.

Providence now means God to me. Yes, I can thank God I am alive.

I am not a praying man, never have been until this trip. But when I was becalmed for days with no one to talk to, no sound—a silence like death—not a ripple on the glassy water, not a cloud in the sky, not many more beans—then I took to prayer, fervent prayer to my Maker.

And when a gale blew for five days and nights; when I wasn't able to go on the pitching deck of my rudderless ship for fear of being washed overboard; when I had to brace myself 24 hours a day in utter darkness with the wind screaming through the rigging like seven demons—I can tell you I prayed.

I read the Bible through twice. I had a few novels, but didn't touch them. I found all I needed in the Bible.

DISTRESS SIGNAL UNSEEN

That kept me from going mad, I guess. During the past two months when time meant nothing except less to eat, I felt I was going crazy. No, it wasn't exactly a crazy feeling but rather:

"Oh, God, what more can I do?"

There wasn't any answer to my question.

Just like there wasn't any answer when I saw my first ship pass by in the night. That was on June 14. My 48th day at sea. It was plenty rough. I sighted her off starboard about two miles. I signaled but I guess the captain didn't see me on account of the heavy swell.

Oh, I did some crazy things on my boat during that 115 days of hell. Instead of talking to myself all the time, I thought of myself as "we."

"Shall we eat beans now? What about that rudder we'll make. Dare we go on deck?"

Then I knitted to keep busy. I finished two sweaters, a quilt and some socks. I tore things apart and put them together again. One night during a big five-day blow I decided on a feast of shrimp salad.

I sat in two inches of water on the cabin floor with my feet braced on one bunk and my back on another (that was before I had to burn the bunks as firewood). I put a bowl between my knees and mixed my salad—mayonnaise and all. Then I played my banjo and sang.

On the Fourth of July I experienced the complete calm of the sea. Dead stillness. White heat. But no firecrackers.

ADVISES PLENTY OF BEANS

After my batteries went down I tried to figure how to recharge them. I even thought of taking my emery wheel and attaching it to the generator. But I realized I needed strength more than batteries. You have to conserve your strength when you eat just two cups of beans a day, and nothing else.

Say, speaking of beans, I want to give all you folks who go on boat trips a little good advice. Take plenty of beans. They have saved my life twice.

I left Dutch Harbor April 28 and on July 1 I ran out of everything but beans. Since that time I have eaten a cup of beans in the morning and a cup at night. When the tugboat Commissioner picked me up, my food supply consisted of two handfuls of beans and one pound of moldly flour which I was saving for the last.

I really wasn't worried at the last, though. I sighted land on August 17, my birthday, and favorable winds nursed me closer to shore each day after that until Saturday morning when the tug picked me up.

The woman was sentenced to be shot after she had been convicted of stealing grain near the village of Osinovka.

Man Found Slain, Laundry Slip Clue

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—With two bullet wounds in the head, and the hands folded across his chest, the body of a man was found between Monmouth Beach and here. A Chinese laundry ticket and $1.60 were found in his pockets.

ONE OF THE EUGENE CLOWNS

RITA LAYTON . . . VEST-POCKET EDITION OF SOPHIE TUCKER

Ticket 'Money' Will Be Printed Up To Friday

For the special entertainment of the hundreds of children who will attend the Sun-Telegraph Lucky Buck picnic at Kennywood next Friday, there has been arranged a mammoth stage show, both afternoon and evening, which will be loaded with comedy and thrills.

Among the many acts booked are the "Two Black Dots," who will do some spectacular buck and wing dancing; Rita Layton, the vest-pocket edition of Sophie Tucker; "Holly," the popular character comedian from the R-K-O circuit; "Ukulele Bill," master of the "uke," and also a fine singer; Jewel's Mannikins, a specially fine show for the kiddies. These acts have been obtained through the courtesy of Steve Forrest, who has been managing stage stars and stage productions in Pittsburgh for years.

The regular attractions at Kennywood, augmenting the stage shows, will include the Eugene troupe of acrobats, full of thrills and laughs, and the Vandergoulds with their de luxe "Punch and Judy" production. That's going to be a whale of a show, isn't it?

Well, Lucky Buck day will be here almost before you know it. In the meantime additional Lucky Bucks will be printed in the Sun-Telegraph up to Friday. So, if you think you have not enough to spend for a big day of fun, keep on clipping. A list of locations where the special 15-cent street car passes can be obtained in advance will be announced in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

Japanese Officer Killed in Crash

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A man identified by papers in his pockets as Lieut. Com. Takuya Torii, 38, of the Japanese Royal Navy, was killed today in a collision between two automobiles on Harbor boulevard. He was driving alone.

SPANISH REBEL TO FIGHT DEATH

MADRID, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Gen. Jose Sanjuro, chief of the recent Monarchists' rebellion against the republic, and three of his confederates will be court-martialed within 48 hours and will be threatened with the firing squad.

President Mariano Gomez, of the Supreme Court, announced today that they would be placed on trial tomorrow or Wednesday and that Minister of Justice Alvaro Albornez planned to demand the death penalty for the defendants' part in a short-lived revolt 10 days ago which led to bloodshed in the streets of Madrid.

On trial with Gen. Sanjuro, conqueror of Seville for a brief interval, will be Gen. Herranz, Lieut. Col. Infantes and Capt. Justo Sanjuro. Lieut. Diaz Carmona and a score of lesser army officers will be given an ordinary trial and may receive heavy jail sentences.

BONUS URGED FOR BETTER BABIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—State-paid bonuses for having children of good heredity were advocated at the third International Congress of Eugenics which opened here today.

Failure of so-called birth control methods to limit births of inferior children was asserted. Induced births were reported beneficial to female health in some cases in Russia, but were frowned upon as means of eugenic progress at present.

Protection against immigrant genes even more dangerous to a nation than disease germs was suggested through laws permitting deportation of first generation children of newcomers in any country.

"Equivalence" of women instead of "equality" with men, clothing better suited to motherhood, a tendency in Europe for higher classes to have more children and sterlization of the unfit were mentioned.

The keynote of what the geneticists are fighting for was struck in a statement by Theodore Russell Robie, M. D., that the "greatest single cause of mental deficiency (50 to 65 per cent) is poor heredity."

State payment of $50 monthly to parents of good heredity when their third child reaches its fifth birthday and $10 or more for each child in addition was advocated by Dr. Renato Kehl, of Rio de Janeiro. Deaths of children would end payment. He favored also high inheritance taxes for families with few children, with reductions for large families.

Income tax rebates to cover substantial portions of a child's education were suggested by Dr. J. Sanders, of Rotterdam.

CREDIT EASING SEEN THROUGH LOAN BANK

The United States government will soon be extending aid to individuals in the Pittsburgh district through two different channels.

A home owner, unable to obtain money from any other source, may borrow direct from the Federal Home Loan Bank system, and any businessman may borrow from the Federal Reserve system on proper collateral.

The holder of real estate, hitherto often unable to borrow on his property, may go directly to the Federal Home Loan Bank, according to the provisions of the act, and borrow up to 40 per cent of the appraised value of his realty.

The new Home Loan Bank districts have not yet been set up nor headquarters selected, but William E. Best, member of the Home Loan Board, believes that the machinery of the new system will be in operation by November 1.

The most beneficial results of the new system, however, it is believed, will be achieved through the building and loan associations, savings banks and life insurance companies. A general easing of credit in the real estate field, where mortgage money has been difficult to obtain, is expected.

The provision that an individual may borrow from the Federal Reserve Bank is in effect for only six months from August 1. It does not lift the restrictions on the type of collateral required.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans only to financial institutions, credit corporations, states or municipalities on projects that may be expected to pay back interest and principal over a period of years.

ANOTHER RUN

Why doesn't she preserve the ELASTICITY* that makes stockings WEAR?

DOESN'T SHE KNOW what causes so many of those runs that ruin stockings?

New stockings give under strain, because they are elastic. They stretch and spring right back again.

But if this precious elasticity is destroyed by cake-soap rubbing or harsh soaps, the silk threads, instead of giving, break under strain.

Lux is made to preserve elasticity. It offers the sure way to make stockings fit and WEAR.

Wash this 2-minute way:
1. One teaspoon of Lux diamonds for each pair.
2. Add lukewarm water to Lux, squeeze through stockings, rinse.

Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali. Lux has no harmful alkali. If it's safe in water it's safe in Lux.

Try Lux FREE! Try this wonderful Lux care for your stockings at our expense. Just send us your name and address, and by return mail you will receive a full-sized package of Lux free. Write today to Lever Brothers Company, Department KX-25, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

1,500 GUARDED AFTER RIOT IN PEN

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—More than 1,500 convicts who plunged the county prison at Holmesburg into a six-hour inferno today were under heavy guard and special patrol.

The uprising, revealed by authorities last night, was the third major revolt in the institution within two years.

Today the building is a shambles of blackened walls, doors and windows, blood-stained clothing and water-soaked cells and corridors.

The riot, planned in protest against the prison food, broke out all over the prison late Saturday night.

Every available guard was called back to duty and extra reinforcements were brought in from Moyamensing and Gratersford prisons. Nearly 125 guards were massed against the rioters.

Every fire hose in the prison was pressed into use, both to quell the enraged inmates and to quench the flames they started in their bed-clothing.

SHIRT AIDS QUIZ IN WIFE KILLING

RICHMOND, Ind., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A blood-stained shirt which Union County officers said they found in the home of Guy Gunsaulie near Billingsville, today provided the spur for continued investigation of the slaying there Friday of the farmer's wife, Eleanor, 32.

Union County authorities came to the Wayne County Jail here last night to question Gunsaulie. An all-night quiz at Liberty, Ind., Saturday night failed to shake his story that he knew nothing of the killing of his wife.

Mrs. Nellie Kumler, 38, housekeeper for the Gunsaulies, had first confessed she was the killer, but later repudiated it, saying Gunsaulie had slain his wife and had threatened to kill Mrs. Kumler if she did not accept the blame for the act.

ANGLO-FRENCH PARLEY OPENS

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(A.P.)—Negotiations for a Franco-American commercial treaty entered the formal stage today when French and American experts in economics held their first meeting at a luncheon given at the American embassy by the United States ambassador, Walter E. Edge.

Plans were outlined for future meetings at which the whole field of commercial relations between France and the United States will be explored.

It was decided that the experts would meet again shortly at the French Ministry of Commerce offices.

There has been considerable discussion here of the possibility that an Anglo-French trade treaty would be negotiated, one published report going so far as to say that negotiations would be opened this week. At the British embassy it was stated no steps had been taken here thus far.

AUGUST FUR SALE

IF we were to discard all the ideals we have maintained through the past fifty-seven years, we could sell Fur Coats today at such prices as $59.50 or $89.50. We might sell such coats as Electric Seal, Northern Seal, Near Seal (all of which are nothing but dyed rabbit).

We refuse to lower our standards and sacrifice our ideals to do that unsatisfactory class of business. It is unsatisfactory because fur coats of that type are never worth while . . . their purchase is anything but an economy.

On the other hand, we are selling coats this month of the type for which we have earned a reputation, and at prices that have not been equaled for the past eighteen years. One example is a Seal-Dyed Muskrat (Hudson Seal) Coat at $135.00. We are certain there is nothing to compare with it—in fashion, in quality and in workmanship. We are taking orders to make Black Caracul Coats to individual measurements and styles at $365.00 . . . and these coats are of choice baby caracul skins . . . lustrous, and magnificently moired.

This is an opportune time to buy a fur coat. It is also a time when the greatest care must be exercised in its selection. Do not be misled by a mere price-appeal. You will find that a fine fur coat, such as we make, is actually lower in price, comparatively, than the so-called bargain fur coats which are being exploited.

There are just eight days more of this August Sale. At its conclusion all the special August tags will be removed, and regular prices . . . which average Twenty-Five Per Cent higher . . . will go into effect.

G. O. P. VOTES GO TO ROOSEVELT

voted for him in 1928, while only 928 set themselves down as voting Democratic four years ago. The remaining 1,213 were non-committal.

Hoover backers of 1928 predominate in those who have sent in poll ballots, 36,476, or 56 per cent, of the 64,850 tabulated being recorded by voting Republican in the last election. Supporters of the Democratic ticket four years ago numbered 23,648, or 26 per cent of the poll balloters. The remaining 4,726, or 8 per cent, were in the non-committal group.

G. O. P. RANKS BROKEN

The 36,476 Republicans of four years ago are now divided, 58 per cent for Hoover, and 42 per cent for Roosevelt. On the other hand the solid support Roosevelt is getting within his own party is revealed in the 97 per cent of the 1928 Democratic vote he is holding, giving only 3 per cent to his opponent.

Outstanding among the states where Roosevelt has cut into the Republican fold is California where he has drawn almost double the number of votes that have gone to Hoover. New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois are three others among the larger states where Roosevelt is showing an extraordinary pull of former Hoover supporters to his standard this year.

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Gov. Roosevelt can win the November election with a comfortable margin of electoral votes if he carries only those states that are giving him 60 per cent or more of the votes thus far tabulated in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Alabama, 11; Arizona, 3; Arkansas, 9; California, 22; Florida, 7; Georgia, 12; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 9; Nevada, 3; North Carolina, 13; South Carolina, 8; Texas, 23; Virginia, 11, and Wisconsin, 12; all showing 70 per cent or more for Roosevelt, and in addition:

Illinois, 27; Indiana, 14; Kentucky, 11; Maryland, 8; Minnesota, 11; Missouri, 15; Nebraska, 7; Oklahoma, 11; Oregon, 5; South Dakota, 4; Tennessee, 11; Utah, 4; Washington, 8; West Virginia, 8, and Wyoming, 3, ranging from 60 to 69 per cent for Roosevelt.

The 70 per cent and over group has 153 electoral votes with 147 in the 60 to 69 per cent group.

There is not a single state east of the Alleghanies and north of the Potomac in these groups except Maryland. The eastern area, including the six New England states, and New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, appear at this early stage to be the battleground of the campaign.

President Hoover is leading in all the New England states, but in only three by better than 60 per cent. They are New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts. Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut range between 52 and 58 per cent in his favor.

PENNA. TO ROOSEVELT

The per centages for New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware range from 53 to 59 in favor of Roosevelt.

West of the Alleghanies, Ohio and Michigan show relatively the same percentages for Roosevelt.

In the corn belt, west of the Mississippi, North Dakota, Iowa and Kansas are the comparatively close states, the first two favoring Roosevelt and the last, Hoover.

Not a single state in the Southeast or Southwest fails to show 60 per cent or better for Roosevelt. Kentucky is the closest of the lot with a 60-40 standing.

TALLY PLEASES ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, Aug. 22.—Gov. Roosevelt expressed keen interest today in the first tabulation of results in the nation-wide presidential poll now being conducted by the Hearst newspapers.

The Democratic nominee asked to have described to him how the poll was taken and how it was checked and cross-checked to insure accuracy.

Gov. Roosevelt was particularly pleased over the fact that the first tabulation by states showed him breaking into normal Republican territory in the Midwest and on the Pacific Coast. This corresponds with confidential advices reaching him from impartial sources.

IRISH MILITARY PARLEY ON

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Aug 22—(AP.)—Two hundred members of the Irish Republican Army, most of them armed, moved into Donaman Castle during the night to hold a convention of their organization.

The building is unoccupied and there was no resistance to their entry. The government made no attempt to eject them and officials at the Republican Army headquarters here said it would not be in the public interest to make any statement.

DROGHEDA, Irish Free State, Aug. 22—(AP.)—President Eamon de Valera, of the Irish Free State, today summed up his policy regarding the payment of land annuities to the United Kingdom with the pledge that:

"England will not get her money until she proves her right to it. We have put our money into a suspense account and it is there for all the world to see."

ARREST THREE IN HEINZ FIRES

BOWLING GREEN, O., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Three men were held for investigation today in connection with three fires which authorities believed were of incendiary origin.

The fires, all on property of the H. J. Heinz Company, of Pittsburgh, resulted in $25,000 damage. Insurance covered the loss.

The first blaze broke out at 9:30 p. m. Saturday in a barn in which green hay and oats were stored. It caused a loss estimated at $9,000. Then at 1 a. m. today a $10,000 warehouse in another part of town burned to the ground. The third fire, at 5:30 a. m., destroyed a small storehouse.

Names of the suspects were withheld pending filing of charges. Officers said, however, they believed the men were disgruntled former Heinz employes.

N. J. OFFICIAL'S DAUGHTER SHOT

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Aug. 21.—(Universal.)—Miss Evelyn Higgins, 25, daughter of Col. William A. Higgins, military aide to Gov. A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, was mysteriously shot in the abdomen yesterday.

With her brother, William, Jr., her sister, Mae, 23, and another girl and two youths she was returning in an auto to the Higgins home from a dancing party.

Mae Higgins became ill and Vincent Brady, 23, driver, stopped the car. Mae got out and went to a vacant lot nearby.

Gibbons, Sloan, Dan Beard In Coach Guild Award Celebration on WCAE

Ceremonies attending the presentation of $5,000 university scholarships to the four winners of the second annual Napoleonic coach competition of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, including addresses by a long list of notable speakers, are broadcast over a nation-wide NBC network, including WCAE, tonight at 9:30 o'clock.

Acting as master of ceremonies, Floyd Gibbons introduces Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, who delivers the address of welcome to the guests of honor, who include a dozen internationally known technical educators; Dan Beard, "Father of the Boy Scouts;" industrial leaders and newspaper representatives. Attending the dinner tonight are the winning boys from each of the 48 states, the District of Columbia and the seven Canadian districts of the guild, including the two Pennsylvania winners, Raymond F. Sekulski, of Harrisburg, and Paul R. Rempp, of Springhouse.

Dan Beard

W. A. Fisher, president of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, will announce the four scholarship winners, and H. J. C. Henderson, secretary of the guild, will outline the guild's plans for next year.

The Sun-Telegraph, represented tonight by Max Henrici, sponsored the Pennsylvania competition.

The music of Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, which opens a three-night engagement at the Willows tonight, will be broadcast twice daily by WWSW. Tonight's broadcasts are scheduled for a half hour at 8:30 and again at 11. Lopez's rhythm was a feature of the cigaret dance hour Saturday night.

Program Pointers

A new Columbia series entitled "Musical Album of Popular Classics," featuring a symphony orchestra, male chorus and soloists under the direction of Andre Kostelanetz, makes its debut tonight on WJAS at 9:30. Barbara Maurel, contralto; Theo Karle, tenor; Della Baker, soprano, and Crane Calder, bass, are tonight's soloists. Included on the program are Cui's "Oriental" in a special arrangement for male chorus, Liszt's "Liebestraum" and Ponce's "Estrellita." The presentations will be heard each Monday night at the same hour.

Miss Maurel

A brand new fox trot, "Moon," and a medley from the popular Ed Wynn Laugh Parade are highspots of Whispering Jack Smith's program with the Humming Birds trio on KDKA tonight at 10:15.

Three memory hits, "Memories," "Among My Souvenirs" and "Just a Memory," are featured by Harold Stokes and his orchestra, with a male quartet, on KDKA at 8.

The Home Circle inaugurates its new schedule—daily at 5:45—today on WCAE. The change was made in order that business men may tune in on the programs.

A dramatization depicting the origin of "The Marseillaise," the French national anthem, is presented by a group of NBC artists over a network including KDKA tonight at 8:30.

Selections from the works of Mozart, Dvorak, Debussy and Schubert are offered by the Columbia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Howard Barlow on WJAS at 11.

A spirited Spanish march, "Granada-Paso Doble," by the contemporary Spanish composer, Alfonso Vidal, and a special transcription of two Russian Gypsy songs, "Faded Chrysanthemums" and "Duma" are featured by the Gypsies on WCAE at 9.

Fan Fare

Alfred Corn, the youthful NBC actor who's heard as "Sammy" in the Goldbergs, has moved back to Manhatton from Belle Harbor, L. I., and given up commuting since a railroad accident nearly prevented him from making a broadcast recently. He arrived at the Belle Harbor station at the usual time to take his train to New York only to learn that a derailed engine had tied up the lines for an indefinite period, so he jumped into a taxicab and made a mad dash for the studios, arriving just in time to go on the air.

Olsen and Johnson do their antics behind a curtain now, because they made their studio audience laugh at purely visual things lost to the radio listeners . . . but wait till television gets around the corner!

Sigmund Spaeth, the "Song Sleuth" and "Tune Detective," reveals how he traces the words and music of popular and classical selections to their humbler origins in a new talkie short.

John Seagle, the Cavaliers' baritone, was named for Jean de Reszke, who gave Seagle his first vocal lessons when the latter was only three.

Phillips Lord feels that he is one up on Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Five days each week he's the jolly old "Country Doctor" and on Sunday, he's "Seth Parker" . . . but he's managed to reserve Saturday for his true identity—that of "Daddy" to his two children.

Buck Bannister, famous barnyard imitator on the Corn Cob Pipe programs, got his start in the old days when farmers used to drive their cattle and farmyard fowl to market through the streets of Richmond. Buck made his spending money by following the parade and imitating the animals to help keep them in line.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Today we're going to talk about a wedding, one which will be one of the brilliant events of bright autumn, the marriage of Christine Johnson, daughter of the Hussey Burdell Johnsons, of Wilkins avenue, and Charles N. Lennox, of the Pennsylvania Apartments.

Christine has just decided on the members of her bridal party. The wedding will take place, by the way, at 5:30 o'clock the afternoon of October 10 in the Bellefield Presbyterian Church with the pastor, the Rev. Robert MacGowan, as officiant.

Bridal Party

Martha Jane Johnson will be her sister's maid of honor, and Elizabeth Davison, Helen McCune, Lorraine Taylor, Alice Arnd, Jane Forrester and Dorothy Hardie will be bridesmaids.

Serving as best man will be S. Harris Johnson, Jr., and as ushers Edmund M. Campbell, Charles G. Cole, C. Donald Davidson, of Coraopolis; J. Robert Autenreith, of Beaver Falls, cousin of the bride-elect, De Walt J. Hicks, Jr., and Harry C. May, Jr.

Mary L. Murphy Has Church Wedding

The Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church was the scene Saturday night of a pretty wedding when Miss Mary Louise Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Murphy, became the bride of John H. Louthan, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Louthan, of Harrison avenue, Avalon.

The bride entering the church with her father, wore a gown of white satin made with a lace yoke. Down the length of the tulle veil hung a panel of princess lace and she carried a sheaf of madonna lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Martha McKeever, of Meadville, and the matron of honor, Mrs. Charles R. Clark, were in green crepe de chine, gowns patterned after the same lines being worn by the bridesmaids, Mrs. Robert L. Murphy and Mrs. James G. Stedeford. All the attendants carried Johanna Hill roses.

The men in the party included William H. Rhodes, as best man, and the ushers, Robert L. Murphy, Edgar C. Dehne, Edward J. Stewart, of Cleveland, and Dr. John M. Hyslop. Little William Marshall Murphy was ring bearer.

The ceremony, performed at 8:30 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Ralph B. Urmy, was followed by a small reception and supper at the Murphy home in Teece avenue, and later Mr. and Mrs. Louthan motored to New York, where they will take a boat for a Canadian cruise. They are to be at home in Jackman avenue, Avalon, after September 5.

Playing Ping Pong 17 Hours Chases Pound of Fat

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22.—(Universal.)—To wear off a single pound of fat a person must walk at least 144 miles at the rate of two miles per hour; or play ping pong for 17 hours; or saw wood for 10½ hours.

So declared Dr. J. C. Geiger, noted medical authority, and director of San Francisco's public health department. He said:

"Even if we lose the pound, incautious exercise of old gustatory habits will bring it back. For instance, a piece of bread and butter may replace all the fat we lose by walking several miles."

PRINTS MOST FASHIONABLE SUMMER EVENING MATERIAL

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Prints and printed effects are still the most popular materials for evening dresses in Paris. Originally American fashions, they have been taken up by French women as the most satisfactory and most fashionable of hot weather evening clothes. In linens, in pique and in chiffon, they are being worn at the smartest Parisian dancing places and promise to continue to be popular through the autumn.

* * *

THE FAVORITES of all the printed patterns are those that take to small designs. Little sprays of flowers embroidered on linen or chiffon follow printed designs. Prints themselves are of the dot-and-dash variety—many of them copying accurately the patterns familiar in gingham and calico. White dots against black backgrounds, in crepe de chine, in foulard, in linens and cottons are used to make some of the smartest dance frocks on the French capital.

* * *

THERE ARE dots of several colors printed on the chiffon of the Fauvety dress pictured today. With its jacket-like blouse and longish sleeves, it is designed to be worn for dinner, for afternoon bridge and for dancing. The background is pale blue, the dots in pink, brick and beige.

* * *

THERE IS an old-fashioned touch in the two deep ruffles at the hem of the skirt, and terminating the sleeves. The blouse ends in two scarf-ties which cross at the front, circle the waist and tie in a sash at the back.

* * *

LITTLE SPRAYS of flowers are embroidered on the linen dress from Worth, also sketched for today. Its flowers and fabric are all white, the only touch of color is in the linen flowers at the right arm-eye, in red and in white.

Units in Crafton Plan Profitable Year's Study

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

These departmental clubs pack almost as much interest and entertainment into their departmental meetings as they do into the general programs. Take the Crafton Woman's Club, for instance. Its music department during the season will discuss Pennsylvania music, American folk songs, the origin of American Negro music, and the songs of American war periods. Also it will present a program before the entire club, and it will give a Foster recital and an analysis of jazz.

Current plays, the plays of Eugene O'Neill, "The Green Pastures," and Goethe's "Faust" will be studied by the drama department. The Pittsburgh-made "Christmas in the Heart," by May T. Neff, will be given as will Percival Wilde's "What Never Dies" and Samuel S. K. Fung will talk on "The Chinese Theater."

To Study Plays

Literature department members will learn all about the new poets and poetry, America in literature, Christmas in literature and music, the American short story, the modern novel and the modern drama, the last to be discussed by George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph.

ZONERS REJECT COX HOME PLAN

Plans of Father James R. Cox to establish a permanent home for destitute men in the Strip district, near his parish, were halted today by a decision of the Zoning Board of Adjustment which refused the priest permission to use the property for a home.

Father Cox, with the assistance of several influential friends, for some time has been seeking to take over and remodel two or three of the abandoned factory and loft buildings. He had planned to establish the "Father Cox Foundation," to make possible a permanent home for destitute men. Father Cox was to be the director of the foundation.

The Zoning Board refused permission for the priest to occupy a large building at 2813-15 Penn avenue. Father Cox said he is now negotiating for buildings in the vicinity of Fourteenth street.

People See Faults in Each Other After Marriage

"Why, why didn't I know Dick was like this before I went and married him?"

That's Myrt's moan.

And is there anything really serious wrong about the big boy? Well, no, not if you've been married long enough to learn to take 'em as they come.

But, you see, Myrt's a brand-new bride, and up to the time she marched up to the altar with him he was her perfect hero. He was so careful, and neat, and everything!

And now? Well, now that all the excitement is over, and they've settled down in their own little home, he leaves damp towels all over the bathroom, and his clothes where he crawls out of them and spills ashes on her brand-new rug.

And he won't seem to pay a bit of attention when she calls him for it! In fact, sometimes he even makes a snappy comeback when she does!

HUBBY HAS CHANGED

Ever hear a story like that before? Sure, you have!

Dear Miss Martin:

I wonder if you can help me. Maybe you think this is a silly problem, but it isn't to me. It's getting me crazy.

You see, Dick and I have been married just a little while, not quite two months, in fact, and we've just settled down in our own little home, a cute little cottage in the suburbs. And I can't understand it, but somehow Dick seems so different from what he was when we were just engaged. Maybe I expect too much, or something, but I don't know what to think. Everything is so new to me that I feel the need of some advice.

You see, I was brought up in a very neat home. My mother was a dandy housekeeper, and she never allowed us kids to muss things up. I don't mean that we couldn't feel free to enjoy ourselves, but we were supposed to pick things up and not leave them lying around.

And that's just what Dick won't do. He leaves wet towels all over the bathroom floor, and he drops his pajamas where he steps out of them. Nor is that all. He just calmly flips cigaret ashes on our new rug, instead of using an ash tray (and I have plenty of them), and thinks nothing at all of it. He scatters the papers all over the living room, too, and never thinks of gathering them up after he's through with them.

VERY UNTIDY

This place would be a sight if I didn't run around after him all the time. On Sunday, it usually looks as if a cyclone had hit it.

I never dreamed he would be like this when I married him. He was always so careful, and so anxious to do everything just the way I wanted it, and now he is just the opposite. He even got very cross a time or two when I scolded him for being so untidy. I don't know what to think. Why is he so different?

Please help me.

PERPLEXED MYRTLE.

Why's he different?

Well the real answer to that, youngster, is that he really isn't. He was just like that always, only you didn't know it, because he was putting his best foot forward while he was trying to get you to team up with him.

Now don't get mad at that. He wasn't trying to deceive you. He was only being careful—and you were, too. For courtship is the same the world over. The very birds sing their sweetest notes and show off their brightest feathers when spring and nest-building are in the air.

But now things have come down to earth, and you're seeing Dick, for the first time, not as the marvelous being your romantic fancy painted him, but as just a human being, with plenty of hang-nails and funny habits.

But you mustn't forget that he's seeing you the same way.

Never thought of that, did you? Well, it's true. You probably have a dozen little ways that irritate him.

So stop feeling hurt, and begin seeing things as is, honey. Any man you married would do a few things that grated on you. Stop scolding him, and try to get him to co-operate with you. Kid him a little. Appeal to his pride. Praise him when he does do nice things for you, and he'll want to do more of them.

And here's another tip. Stop feeling that you're performing such a tremendous service and making such a frightful sacrifice when you pick up after Dick.

After all, that picking up is part of your job. It's as much up to you to make the home nice for Dick as it is up to him to keep the bills paid for you. You're not doing him a favor. You're simply keeping your end of the bargain, and paying your way as you go.

And if you don't like picking up soiled socks, just remember, Sissy, he's doing things far more disagreeable than that for you.

So stop being quite so full of self-pity and begin to do a little appreciating, and maybe your marriage will last longer.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Secret Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

My wife's family and mine are undecided as to what the correct and proper procedure is in announcing a secret marriage? My wife and I were married June 30, 1931. Only a few members of both families are aware of marriage. Should my wife's parents send out conventional formal announcement to all of our friends and relatives? If so, how should the announcement be worded? HUSBAND.

The sending out of so tardy an announcement as this has always seemed to me inappropriate and ill-advised. It so definitely calls attention to the tardiness of the announcement, while if the announcement is more casually made, it does seem the more natural way. Don't you agree?

I think the wisest and most sensible thing to do is for the bride and groom to tell their relatives and friends of the marriage . . . going together to see each other's relatives and close friends, those who live near enough for this personal visit. Then they would write notes to those who live too far away for this call. Soon enough . . . as you know . . . the "sweet secret" will be known! Romantic news like this travels probably faster than any other kind of news.

Then at the first opportunity they can, when they are in their own home, plan to give a housewarming, welcoming all their relatives and friends.

Fay King Wishes Mothers Who Weep for Their Children Could Meet

I WILL NEVER CONSENT TO THAT MARRIAGE
I'D DO ANYTHING WITHIN HUMAN POWER TO SAVE MY CHILD!
IT BREAKS MY HEART TO SEE MY CHILD SO UNHAPPY!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

One mother weeps because her child is in love with, and is loved by someone of whom she does not approve.

She never will consent to that marriage. Her home and heart will be closed to them if they defy her and elope. She declares she would rather see her child dead than make this marriage.

Another mother weeps because her child is at death's door. She would make any and every sacrifice to save her child. How willingly she would consent to such a marriage to see her child well and happy!

Another mother weeps to see her child so unhappy in unrequited love. If she could only make the unworthy one who does not care, appreciative and responsive.

Would that these mothers might meet!

Hints for the Household

Pour boiling water over onions immediately before peeling them and your eyes will not smart or water.

Instead of putting the freshly laundered blouses into the drawer just any old way, place a sheet of tissue paper between each one. It will keep them fresh and uncrumpled much longer and look better when you go to wear them.

A fork should never be stuck into a steak or chop that is being fried or grilled. This lets the juice out.

Particular attention should be paid to the child's lunch box now that the weather is warmer. It must be kept absolutely clean and well aired when not in use or an unpleasant odor will arise and take away the youngster's appetite for his lunch.

Many of us have a person in our home who makes no effort to control a mean disposition and consequently proves an unending source of unhappiness. Try to band the rest of the family together and decide to treat the disposition as if it were good. It might help the crankly person to find himself and it certainly makes for a better morale around the home.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If a girl whose complexion is polka dotted with blackheads could see a patch of it under a microscope, she would decide then and there that she could no longer live with her own face. She would do those things that beauty rules say should be done, give her complexion a thorough renovating. A simple treatment consists of bathing the face with warm water and soap, rinsing with hot water, patting into the moist skin surface a powder made by combining one ounce of powdered boric acid and one ounce of baking soda. These two beauty aids form a chemical action with the fatty substance that clogs the pores, helping to remove the barricades.

Equal parts of boracic talcum powder and powdered orris root form a powder that eases feet that perspire freely, smart and burn. Sprinkle talcum in the shoes. Rinse hosiery in a solution of borax, one teaspoonful of borax to two quarts of water. Summer is tough on little dogs. They need plenty care, nice attentions.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Trusting Partner

The secret of success at the Contract table is full confidence in your partner. After all, he is probably just as anxious to win the game or rubber, or to secure the best possible score on the hand, if the game is Duplicate, as you are, and even if his methods appear unusual—perhaps even insane, and in some cases idiotic—you should still trust him, as it is possible he has a keener appreciation of the values in his own hand and a more exact knowledge of distribution than you hold. This is particularly true on hands where he has indicated a desire to take charge of the bidding—to be the captain, as it were—and when your holdings clearly indicate that your hand must play a subordinate part, it is the counsel of wisdom to let him have his way.

Mr. Oliver Westbury, of Winnipeg, Canada, sent me the hand below, which was played in a recent Rubber game and presented some unusual bidding by North and South partnership.

West—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable; East-West 30.

	♠ A 5 4 2 ♡ Q J 3 ◇ Q 7 5 4 2 ♣ 7
♠ K Q J 10 3 ♡ 6 5 2 ◇ J 8 3 ♣ Q 6	North West East South	♠ 9 8 7 6 ♡ K 4 ◇ A K 10 9 6 ♣ 3 2
	♠ — ♡ A 10 9 8 7 ◇ — ♣ A K J 10 9 8 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
	1 ♠ (1)	Pass	3 ♠ (2)
3 N T (3)	Double (4)	Pass	Pass
4 ♣ (5)	Pass	4 ◇ (6)	Double (7)
5 ♣	Pass	5 N T (8)	Double
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Double
Redouble (9)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) West's Opening bid is unsound.

(2) A game bid.

(3) A perfectly justifiable psychological bid. South, with his unusual holding, hopes to buy the contract at five clubs, and hopes to confuse the hand patterns to East and West.

(4) West's Double is also unsound, but is perhaps designed to disclose to East that the spade holding of South should not justify the bid of three no-trump.

(5) South, of course, must now seek cover.

(6) North decides to rescue, misled by partner's three no-trump bid.

(7) A bad Double, as East cannot double any other bid, but the psychic barrage is working.

(8) Natural enough in view of South's first bid.

(9) Mr. Westbury explains this Redouble as being actuated by a feeling of pique because of his partner's bid of five no-trump, which had upset his plans.

South, due to the extreme freakishness of his holding, made not only his contract, but an overtrick as well. The spade King was opened, won by the Ace in Dummy, and the heart Quen led and finessed. This was followed with the heart Knave, upon which East's King fell, the trumps were drawn, and South won all the tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Can a Forcing bid be made after a game has already been reached?

Answer—No. There are no Forcing bids after a game contract. However, an Overcall in a suit bid by the opponents is a Slam invitation, and of necessity requires partner to bid again, and any Jump bid past game shows great strength and is an indication to partner that the hand holds possibilities of a Slam.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Discovery of Infantile Paralysis in Early Stages Important

Not long ago I discussed the after-care of children afflicted with infantile paralysis. Children that do not receive proper attention remain in a crippled and paralyzed condition throughout life. This is a pity.

Dr. Copeland

Although great advances have been made in the study of infantile paralysis, the germ or other cause of this disease has not been discovered; but remarkable success has attended the after-care, with prevention of the disabling results of this dreaded disease. Since the cause of the disease is not known, no means of prevention can be found. But certainly it is essential that all suspected cases of infantile paralysis receive the benefit of all the accumulated knowledge regarding the care of the victim.

Infantile paralysis occurs more frequently than most of us suspect. It may be in an extremely mild form, and the signs and symptoms are sometimes extremely vague.

The onset of the disease may be sudden, with fever and some form of intestinal upset; but these prominent signs may be absent altogether, and the only change noted may be in the habit and behavior of the child. In such cases children usually active and cheerful become quiet, listless and easily annoyed, although in the early stages of the disease paralysis is not present.

When paralysis does occur it is not marked at first, but progressively attacks various parts of the body. Sometimes the paralysis may involve one part of the body for a short time, then shift to some other part. In some cases it persists in the part first involved.

You see how difficult it is to determine just what is wrong. It is important that a diagnosis be made as soon as possible. Whenever a child shows any of the signs I have mentioned, it is imperative that a doctor be consulted.

Even the physician may be puzzled. Often it is impossible to make a diagnosis without the aid of a spinal puncture. This is a simple procedure and should not be dreaded. Some of the fluid in the spinal cord is obtained and examined under a microscope, and this generally makes it possible to determine the presence or absence of the disease.

When the disease has been recognized in its early stages use of a "convalescent serum" has prevented the occurrence of paralysis in many cases, and has averted fatal complications. This serum is taken from the blood of an individual who has recovered from infantile paralysis.

Children afflicted with infantile paralysis must remain away from school for a period of at least three weeks. They must not come in contact with other children. Neither should children who have been exposed be allowed to attend school. They should be kept under close observation for at least two weeks after the date of exposure. Those who have had the disease need not undergo strict quarantine.

I am glad to say that the number of cases of this disease reported has greatly decreased within the past year.

FRANK & SEDER—FIFTH FLOOR

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: There's a Hollywood wire from Eddie Cantor . . . He says that when George M. Cohan arrived out there, one of the studio ½wits handed him a questionnaire that is usually given to new people on the lot and asked him to fill it out . . . Cohan looked it over a couple of times and finally came to the question: "What have you done in the American theater?" . . . He asked the stooge to get him an indelible pencil and finally filled out the space as follows: "Give me a 24-sheet and I'll tell you." . . . I was told the reason you didn't come into the office the last two days was because you were looking through a large keyhole into a room in which four sun lamps were burning . . . And that you had to wait until the keyhole-shaped burn on your face wore off . . .

You better warn your Broadway pals not to approach any of those smart looking lasses in the Astor lobby . . . They may prove to be detectives . . Their real purpose, however, is not so much to molest molesters as it is to keep the really smart lasses out of the building . . . There's something sad about Gus Van's going into the Palace. He will use a pianoist in his act for the first time since the death of his famed partner, Joe Schenck . . . Don't fail to cover the act . . . Did you know that Charley, who has waited on every star in the business during his 14 years at Reuben's, has never been inside the Roxy or the Capitol . . . Leonard Gaynor dropped in to tell you about the note Jay Sullivan wrote to the Hollywood queen when he was doing one-night stands in the sticks and she was earning $3,000 a week making personal appearances on Broadway . . . It read: "Lucky you have no talent, or you'd be doing this, too" . . . The Jay (adv. agents) Blackburns (Lucille Meadows) are blessed eventing . . . as are the James Saxtons (Agnes Baldwin, the former Scandal beauty) . . . Starting next week, we gals will be able to get our initials on the stockings we buy at the dept. stores . . . It prevents your sister from swiping them . . . I don't know why I tell you all this.

George Jessel called . . . So did Norma Talmadge . . . You don't think they could have been looking for each other, do you? . . . Dave Alber tells me a friend of his was making one of those dizzy bargain cruises to Bermuda and the West Indies and that he received a radio from him saying: "We've sighted land. If this is Thursday, it must be Havana." . . . Could you see your way clear to letting me off for a week . . . I need a rest and I'd like to drink one of those cruises myself . . .

. . . That Hollywood commedian who is now in the ascendency will suffer a heart attack when he learns that he is being named corespondent in a Renovation for an indiscretion with a Follies sweet over two years ago. . . . You can't live down a past, no matter what you do! . . . I wired St. Louis and Chicago; you'll find the copies in your upper left hand drawer, the one you always forget to lock . . . Claire Briggs was not the first cartoonist to have a cigar named after him . . . Twenty years ago a stogie came out of Pittsburgh with a band bearing John T. McCutcheon's picture . . . It's funny over there in the Eve. Post offices . . . Chas. Pike Sawyer, the music defender, and Thornton Delehanty, the movie seer, have adjoining desks, and each brags of direct descendancy from an American President . . . Sawyer comes from John Quincy Adams' tribe, and Delehanty is one of the George Washingtons.

Octavus Roy Cohen called you before he returned to his native Alabama . . . He's going to write Negro dialogue for the air and I hope he brings his "Florian Slappey" to life . . . You shouldn't have tripped Al Smith as he tried to get to his seat at the William Brady premier Tuesdee night . . . Do you want to bring the standing of columnists any lower? . . . The elevator man at 400 E. 57th St. was an ace in the Imperial Russian air forces and brought 16 German planes down . . . Harry Barris called . . . He wanted to invite you to the opening at Playland tonight where he will master-of-ceremony "acc'd to a new formula." . . . It's about time somebody discovered a new way of mc'ing . . . They tell me Chamberlain Brown caught two street-urchins sneaking into the Ambassador Theater, where his "Scrap Book" was playing, and as punishment made the kids remain for two shows . . . They've given the Father of Our Country a decidedly hooked nose on those new silver quarters.

Peter Arno called from Atlantic City again . . . He says that every time he gets lonesome for Broadway he calls you, and then he's glad he's in Atlantic City. . . . You should be glad to know that pretty Helene Cambridge is rehearsing with Fred Stone. . . . The Harry Calenners of the steel fortune are Reno-bound. . . . At the birthday celebration of Coward-McCann, the publishers, the beer flowed freely all afternoon but the sandwich table remained deserted . . . One of the execs took the situation in quickly and started admonishing the guests. "That's the trouble with the publishing business," he shouted. "You authors are not hungry enough." . . . Which is my idea of a remark swelegant. . . . One of the best speakeasy true stories came in today . . . It seems that a well known critic on a morning rag had his pocket picked in an Eighth Ave. dive a few nights ago and the pickpocket immediately went into another room to tell the bartender about the easy take . . . But the bar-keep, being a friend of the critic's host, insisted that he return the money . . . When the Park Rowgue got home that night, he found twice as much money in his pocket as was there when he originally started out. . . . To play safe, the speakeasy proprietor had shoved an additional roll into the critic's jeans.

After spending a whole day interviewing the music publishers, Sid Parry says it should be called Dead Pan Alley. . . . Throw an orchid at P. Doyle and B. Mencken for taking the 500 forlorn kiddies out to the ball game and giving each a pair of shoes. . . . And throw a few more orchids at all the others who follow suit.

Your Girl Friday.

Colleen Moore Is Called Back to Screen by M-G-M Contract

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.

Almost three years to the day since Colleen Moore started her last production for Warners-First National, she will begin her first talking picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

On August 18, 1929, Colleen began work on "Footlights and Fools," one of the first talkies, and a picture that preceded her disappearance from the screen.

On August 29, she is due to begin work on "Flesh," an original by Edmund Goulding, which stars Wallace Beery in the role of a wrestler.

Colleen Moore

Screen fans have been eager to see Wallace in another story of the type of "The Champ" for many months and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer believe they have something in "Flesh" that will be no disappointment to them.

Mentioned for the direction of Colleen's come-back picture is Jack Ford, one of the more capable megaphone wielders.

The colored maid of Helen Vinson, who is supporting Paul Muni for Warner Brothers in "I'm a Fugitive," decided to get married the other day.

Before the ceremony, the maid came to Helen with her savings and asked her to put them in her safety deposit box. The actress told the maid she ought to give the money to her new husband to keep.

"'Deed no, miss," was the reply. "You don' think I'm going to trust that strange man with mah money!"

BOULEVARD CHATTER

The John Barrymores will christen their new son in Pasadena, soon . . . Filmland playgoers stir over Pauline Frederick's coming appearance at El Capitan in "As Husbands Go." . . . Hollywood's flair for the bizarre was indulged the other day when Gary Cooper treated Princess Brinda, of Kapurthala, India, to a spaghetti and tamale dinner. Gary and Doug Fairbanks played chef . . . Sidney Franklin, the blood and sand man, is driving east after experting Eddie Cantor's bull-fighting yarn, "The Kid From Spain" . . . The efficient Culver City police discovered they had no use for their new black maria. So they've sold it to Pathe for a sound truck . . . Saw Noah Beery at Stark's Bohemian, testing the way they cook his trout. He eats fish like corn on a cob . . . Huck Hiesner was stagging it, too . . . Saw Sue Carol and Dixie Lee (Mrs. Bing Crosby) widowing it at the Brown Derby with Estelle Taylor. Bing is East and Nick Stuart is vacationing afloat. It's Sue's first boulevard appearance since the baby . . . Bebe Daniels starts work on "The Silver Dollar" Monday.

Pauline Frederick

Marking his first picture with Maureen O'Sullivan since he lost out to Tarzan in the Johnny Weissmuller picture, Neil Hamilton has been cast for the romantic lead in M-G-M'S "Payment Deferred."

This is the stage play being filmed under the direction of Lothar Mendes. The cast includes Charles Laughton—the stage recruit—Maureen O'Sullivan, Dorothy Peterson, Veree Teasdale and Ray Miland.

Camera Catches Marie's Many Moods

"No Greater Love" In Sheridan

The Sheridan Square's feature film, "No Greater Love," depicts the drama that swirls about a little crippled girl. Left to the mercies of charity the girl is taken into the home of a Jewish bachelor. Charity, after investigating her case, decides that the child needs a woman to guide her. The crippled girl is played by Betty Jane Graham.

Cohan Gives Beginners Advice

By WALLACE X. RAWLES

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.

"The best way to get on the stage is to throw your hat on and walk on after it."

This was the advice of George M. Cohan, who has spent his lifetime in the theater and has aided hundreds in attaining fame, to stage-struck youths of today.

"Beginners have never been faced with more of a stone wall in the theater than today," Cohan declared.

"The chief cause is the decline of vaudeville and almost total elimination of stock companies.

"Scouts would see an experienced and promising player from these ranks and sign him," Cohan said.

"Today producers dare not try inexperienced players," Cohan continued. "So standby players are cast and youths get no break. Economics made this so.

"But the stage is not training for the future."

Gregory Orchestra For Kennywood

Dan Gregory and his orchestra will play in Kennywood Park's dance pavilion tomorrow evening. The Euguen Troupe of acrobats will appear in the park throughout the week, offering two performances daily. The park management also announces that plans for the Labor Day celebration are nearing completion.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

YESTERDAY, as I was going through some papers on my desk, I came upon a letter that had been mailed to me in care of the Chicago American, on May 17. In some unknown fashion it had slipped from the regular mail and had fallen among my bills and other papers that I very rarely touch. It had not been opened.

I opened it—and came upon one of the most unusual communications ever to hit this desk. I hate to run too many letters in this column, but I think you'll agree when you've read it that it merits publication at any time or on any date. My only regret is that I failed to see it when it arrived here three months ago.

I need tell you no more about it. The letter speaks for itself—and I present it to you as a further substantiation of my claim that I receive some of the most amazing communications that have ever been written. Thus:

"Dear Mark," it reads. "Congratulate me! You ask why? Because it's my birthday. Yep. Born May 16th, 1895. Thirty-seven today.

"But—something went wrong between '95 and '32. Or was it before that? Quien sabe?

"A few years back I hoped to be what you are now, or a Richard Harding Davis, or a Gibbons. No excuses, Mark, but the cards didn't fall right. A lack of courage, perhaps, or a twisted brain. No matter. I didn't click at the writing game.

"Started out on a new path. Faltered, recovered and then rose the wave of gold for a time. Bang! Something hit me, and, Dempsey-like, I didn't duck. I took the count, and when I awoke I looked around. It was the same old story. I found the one woman in the arms of the other man.

"Gin became my solace. More and more I depended upon the memory - blotting, philosophic tipple. Soddenness was an evidence of my devotion to the one woman—or so I thought. Poor fool!

"Then Tragedy knocked at my door with imperious knuckles. Love smiled over my shoulder and offered me—happiness or woe—my choice. I remembered the other man, just as though I were lily white! My choice was made with a six-shooter. Army pistols are deadly things when held in the hand of an ex-sniper. Why go on? You know the rest.

"32—here I am and 37. Perhaps you want to offer me sympathy. Why? I'm guilty. Someone once said that all men are condemned to death at birth, with indefinite respites. How then is my position altered from yours; from other men? How many—before a certain date—will be gone who calculated on a long life?

"How many—between now and then, perhaps, who sing and dance and laugh and live as they please—who breathe and walk in the fresh air and sunshine anywhere they please, will have been ferried across the River Styx? And you, Mark? How about you?

"No! No sympathy. Better give me a bottle and a glass. For what has the world to offer me now that I should regret leaving it? In truth—only sunless days and starless nights in prison. Bitter, torturing thoughts; agonizing, poignant memories.

"And if pardoned—what? An outcast. Branded, cringing, whipped. With bent shoulders, shifty eyes, gnawing hunger, shivering body, a petrified brain and frozen emotions. But then—

"A sickly chill passes over me when I think of another date. That date lives with me day and night. Always I'm alone with it; shackled by it; bent under its weight. Every day, every hour, every minute, every second, I'm haunted by that one date. Yes, I have an engagement to keep. I can't escape that one horrible, one hideous, one unconquerable date with—the chair! Its arms await me—but there is no comfort in them. Only a chilling warmth.

"26th—August—Friday! How innocent those words may seem to you. But to me—like redhot gimlets, those words and that figure bore into my brain. They penetrate every nook and corner of my being. They will scream through my veins until that time when they will burst into a thousand iridescent fragments, and then—what?

"Now I have only one thought, one conviction, one certitude. I can't escape that date—unless the Pardon Board acts. If not, wish me happy landings. And I say to you—sic transit gloria mundi!

"Haven't the nerve to sign this. A friend of mine will type it for me and send it to you—if he can get past the guard." . . .

MASCHKE AGAIN INDICTED

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Maurice Maschke, Cuyahoga County Republican chieftain, and five other Republican leaders, including City Councilman Herman Finkle, were reindicted here today on charges of embezzling founds from the county treasury.

The new indictment, which replaces two true bills returned against the six men previously, accused the defendants of the embezzlement of a total of $177,273.52, and grand larceny of the same amount.

Besides Maschke and Finkle, the indictment named Henry A. Beckerman and H. H. Felsman, Cleveland attorneys; Alex Berstetin, discharged deputy treasurer, and Charles Bernsetin, half-brother of Alex.

MINER KILLED IN BATTLE

BENTON, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The body of Dominick Lauranti, a miner, was found this morning in a patch of weeds at No. 1 mine of the Bell and Zoller Coal Company at Zeigler.

Lauranti had been shot to death.

Residents near the mine said they heard considerable shooting there during the night.

All Franklin County mines were in operation today, with a force of deputy sheriffs on duty to protect those miners who returned to work.

Backed by approximately 250 special deputies, recruited from business men, Sheriff Browning Robinson, of Franklin County, instituted a rule of the "iron fist" yesterday to break up picket lines about the mines and to prevent an invasion of the county by miners who last week staged the siege at Taylorville. Dissatisfaction with the wage scale caused the march on Taylorville.

Additional Troopers Sent to Mine Zone

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Preparing for possibility of further outbreaks of violence in the Indiana coal field, Adjt. Gen. Paul E. Tombaugh last night sent 132 additional National Guardsmen into the district, raising the total on duty to about 300.

Inspection Sticker Clue to Hit-Runner

CHARLEROI, Pa., Aug. 22.—A piece of broken windshield, bearing a portion of a State Highway Department inspection sticker is the clue police have today to the identity of a hit-run driver whose car killed Mrs. Mattie Jackson, 26, Negress, in Gallatin. The glass was found today near where the woman was killed.

Marine Airplane Lost in Nicaragua

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Widespread search was under way today for a United States Marine Corps amphibian plane, missing for 24 hours in a mountainous region of Nicaragua.

The missing craft was piloted by Lieut. Coffman, United States Marine Corps. Two mechanics were also aboard.

ENGLISH LORD HALTS WEDDING

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—London society was surprised today by the sudden halting of the wedding of John Amery, 20-year-old son of Leopold S. Amery, former Secretary of State for the Colonies, and Miss Una Eveline Wing, 22-year-old actress.

Amery, who is a film producer, and Miss Wing called at the Chelsea Register office asking to be married immediately. They were informed that it was impossible, since Amery is a minor.

The Register told him it would be necessary to obtain the consent of his father, who is now on the way back to England from the Ottawa Imperial conference.

It was understood that Lord Greenwood, an uncle of young Amery, telephoned to the Register office asking that the ceremony be held up on the ground the would-be bridegroom was under age.

5 HITLER AIDES DOOMED TO DIE

BEUTHEN, Germany, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Five members of Adolf Hitler's National Socialist party were sentenced to death today upon their conviction of acts of terrorism.

The trial was in one of the new speed courts established under the emergency decree of August 9, which also provided the death penalty for acts of political violence.

Three defendants tried with those who were convicted were found not guilty.

The specific charge was that the defendants had administered a fatal beating to a young Communist living in the village of Potempa, shortly after midnight of the day on which the emergency became effective.

Rider of Bicycle Built for 2 Held As Reckless

EVANSTON, Ill. Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Shades of Queen Victoria! What have we in Evanston jail today, but the rider of a bicycle built for two?

He is James Sayre, 50, and the charge is reckless driving. Motorists recalled the days of bustles and peg-top trousers when they saw Sayre zig-zagging through the streets.

Suddenly, the bicycle fell on its side. But the rider remained intact. So did two bottles of gin in his hip pockets, say the police.

WOMAN RELIEF HEAD KIDNAPED

CHARLESCITY, Ia., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Miss Marion Stull, Floyd County overseer of the poor, was abducted from her office at the city hall today by 75 disgruntled unemployed men who released her several hours later at Alta Vista, 30 miles northwest of here.

She telephoned to authorities here and a car was sent for her. It was not immediately learned whether she had been harmed or threatened.

The group of unemployed, dissatised with pay they were receiving from the county for cutting wood, padraed into town early this morning and filed into Miss Stull's office.

They asked her to "come with us" and she accompanied them, after some protest. Once outside of the building, she made a break to escape the men, but was dragged to an automobile half a block away and hurried out of town.

Romantic Nature of Pretty Widow and Daughter Not Changed by Poverty

CHAPTER I.

Even the neighbors who wouldn't let their children play with her admitted that Val Macfarlane was a nice little thing. And pretty, too, with those big, dark fringed gray eyes, and that marvelously delicate, satin-smooth skin. Still, there are limits.

"DOROTHY! Dor-o-thy!"

"What?"

"I want you. You come right home."

"Oh, mom! Val was just telling us a story!"

"Never mind. You come right home. I want you!"

So the Dorothys and Jeans and Maries of the neighborhood were wont to leave sullenly and reluctantly, and the little Macfarlane girl would be left to look after them longingly.

But she never protested, and she never called them back. The story, an amazing and highly romantic tale of a beautiful young girl who was in some mysterious way related to herself, continued with or without the audience. Val had been telling this story to herself ever since she could remember. Its heroine, who was sometimes herself and sometimes someone quite different, was more real to her than any of the children who listened, open-mouthed, to the telling.

She liked the audience, but it wasn't necessary. She never asked for it. It was always the other children who sought her out, lured not only by the entertainment, but by a certain easy hospitality that exuded from the Macfarlane menage, along with the strains of dance music from Mrs. Macfarlane's phonograph, and the faint, heady perfume that drifted out of her half open door, and was swallowed up swiftly in the dim, musty hall.

The landlady, who was really quite fond of Val and her mother on account of never having to speak twice about the rent, thought the other roomers were unnecessarily fussy.

"This is a respectable house, and I wouldn't have anybody the least—that is—you know what I mean. I mean, if I knew it. Because, I always say, you can't judge by appearances. Mrs. Macfarlane might have a good many gentlemen visiting, but in a housekeeping room, it isn't as if it was a bedroom, if you know what I mean. She talks real refined, and she certainly brings up that young one nice. I declare it's a shame she never has any playmates!"

"Oh, children soon forget!" the mothers of the Dorothys and Jeans and Maries said.

WORLD OF ROMANCE

But Val Macfarlane never forgot. She noticed everything, and remembered everything, long after she and her mother had left the shabby rooming house forever, and gone their separate, checkered ways.

And in spite of the misgivings of the garrulous and good hearted landlady, she wasn't unhappy, and she wasn't lonely. She was a dreamy, imaginative child, and she floated all those first years of her life in a soap-bubble world of romance. Romance of Millie's making.

Millie, the mother, was only a girl herself then. A fragrant, full-blown rose of a girl, with red cheeks and lips made redder out of a box. With a song in her heart, and a laugh on her lips . . . the perfect playmate! Not in the least like other little girls' mothers.

Other little girls' mothers were nice enough in their way, though peculiar about not wanting you to play in their rooms. But they were grown up and uninteresting.

Millie was not like that. She was young and lovely, and she talked to you just as though you were as grown up as she, and let you try on her dresses, and experiment with the sweet smelling stuff in the boxes and jars, and she told you all about sweethearts and what fun it was to be in love.

"How old will I be before I'm in love?"

A YOUNG WIDOW

Millie always laughed at that. Her rich, throaty laugh, that bubbled out of her, as if from some well of secret happiness, way down deep inside.

"Not very old, if you're like your mother!"

Millie had married young. "I was only a little girl myself when I had you, and was left a widow," she told Val, over and over.

That was one of Val's favorite stories, and she privately resolved to have a little baby herself while she was still a little girl. And be a widow and wear long, floating black veils with little white ruchings, and later, black and white. And then soft lilacs, and lavenders, and purples—very trying to the complexion, but Millie of the roses and snow didn't have to mind.

"Will I look pretty in purple when I'm a lady?"

"Oh, yes, darling. You'll be awfully pretty—I'm sure of it."

"Like you, Millie?"

"No, not me. More—I don't know—more aristocratic. But you'll be pretty. Your freckles will all go away and you'll fill out, and hold still, there's a speck of soot."

Millie had a way of wetting the corner of a scented handkerchief with a moist red tongue—cat wash, she called it.

Val preferred the rarer scrubbings with soap and tepid water at the washstand behind the Chinese screen in their room, but you couldn't really resent Millie's washings, cat or otherwise, because she talked of such interesting things while she was washing.

MONEY RUNS LOW

Millie was one of those rare souls who successfully throw a hypnotic glamor over life. Neither death nor poverty had been able to crush her. Oh, she cried sometimes, of course. Cried and called herself the most unfortunate girl that ever lived and hugged Val and told her she didn't know what would become of her, poor lamb. Frightening the child almost out of her senses.

But the tears never lasted long. Pretty soon she'd be pouring eau de cologne on her handkerchief and telling Val to go make a cup of tea for mother, there's a good girl, and then they'd get all dressed up and go out somewhere especially nice.

Toward the last, when the insurance money that had lasted so long was almost gone, they moved a great deal and ate

STATE PAYROLL AIDS NEEDY

HARRISBURG, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—State employes have pledged $500,000 to various organized charities, Gov. Gifford Pinchot announced today.

The Governor pointed out that the total compares favorably with that which would have been made available for charity payments had a 10 per cent cut been made in salaries.

All employes on the state payroll were personally solicited for one day's pay each month to be sent to some organized charity. Contributions were also accepted for the free milk stations now operated in several sections of Western Pennsylvania by the Governor and Mrs. Pinchot.

Voters Prepare To 'Name Baby' at November Polls

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Well, in less than three months the voters will name the baby.

Both sides are as optimistic as bees at a flower show. They are claiming everything, conceding nothing and demand club rates.

Col. House, who filmed that famous reel of wild life in diplomacy, "Bring 'Em Back Exhausted," said the election will be decided by a handful of independent voters. Can it be possible that the colonel has tired of his famous formula which called for the colonel to say nothing and look wise?

That handful of voters is going to be forty million ballots, allowing for a million either way, due to evaporation in New York and Philadelphia.

If that's a handful for the colonel, we'll have to ask the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to buy him a pair of chamois gloves for Christmas.

The colonel knows his political onions, one at a time, but not by the handful. We know there are going to be so many votes cast that some smart politicians are counting them already so they will have a good start by November.

WOMEN BUYING 'TIP' SCORED

Three women who claimed they had paid Mohamed Ali, Hindu herb salesman, $30 for a numbers' lottery tip, "got their medicine," Magistrate John J. Sweeney ruled in South Side Police Court today as he discharged Ali.

Mrs. Catherine Landell, 1917 Sarah street, wife of an invalid; Mrs. J. Martin, 2413 Sarah street, and Mrs. Margaret Smyers, 1917 Sarah street, caused Ali's arrest, claiming his numbers' tip failed.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 22.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

We have a very remarkable woman out here in Los Angeles, the head of one of the world's greatest and most useful organizations, Evangeline Boothe, of the Salvation Army. She says "things are better." That really means something. What could be a greater barometer of the affairs of the unfortunate than her army?

Will Rogers

All the men who offer predictions deal in money. She deals in people. They look at the stock market for an answer. She looks at the notches in the belts. The Salvation Army is proof of how respected and useful an organization can get if you keep it out of politics. So when Evangeline Booth says something about "folks" it means something, for she seeks nothing from us but our down and outers. She takes care of our big men's blunders.

Yours,

WILL.

Coach Contest Winners Celebrate in Detroit

By MAX HENRICI
Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—More than a hundred boys, two from each state and 14 from Canada, winners in the Fisher Body Craftsmen's Guild coach-building contest, were having the time of their lives here today.

They are here for the awarding of four $5,000 college scholarships to the four boys whose coaches are adjudged best, and for a three-day program of entertainment.

The awards will be announced at a dinner tonight, which will be broadcast throughout the nation, with Floyd Gibbons at the microphone as master of ceremonies. Each of the four winners will have a moment on the air.

One of the two Pennsylvania boys attending the convention, Raymond F. Sekulski, of Harrisburg, is making his second trip to Detroit as a guild winner. The other, Paul R. Rempp, of Spring House, was a runner-up last year, but this is his first visit to Detroit.

About two-thirds of the boys arrived Sunday, the largest group coming from the West and Middle West via Chicago and arriving in a body, with adult leaders.

The program today began with a bus ride around the city and Belle Isle and through the tunnel to Windsor, Canada, where luncheon was to be served. The party was to visit Henry Ford's Greenfield Village and industrial museum at Dearborn this afternoon.

6 KILLED HERE IN WEEK-END CRASHES

Child Escapes Injury In Bridge Plunge Fatal to 2

Daniel V. Burns, 18, son of Burgess Daniel Burns, of New Kensington, was at liberty under $5,000 bail today in connection with one of six fatal automobile accidents over the week-end.

According to State Highway Patrolman J. C. Conway, a car driven by young Burns, in which Jane Jenkins, 19, of 1125 Craig street, McKeesport, was a passenger, in trying to pass another car on the Freeport road, last night, crashed head-on with a machine driven by Steve Wenzlouzki, 39, of New Kensington, killing the latter.

SHOE TORN OFF

Patrolman Conway reported that the impact was so severe that one of Wenzlouzki's shoes was knocked from his foot against the windshield of a car coming in the opposite direction. Dr. A. C. Madsern, of Springdale, pronounced Burns under the influence of liquor, according to the officer. Burns was released for a hearing tomorrow by Justice of the Peace Edward Kapteina, of Springdale.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shipley, of 941 Washington boulevard, were killed, and their daughters, Ophelia, 35, and May, 44, were reported critically injured in an accident at the Heth's Run Bridge last night.

Police said they were riding in a machine driven by Ophelia Shipley when it stalled at the end of the Heth's Run Bridge and the entrance to the Highland Park Bridge. When the car again began to move it swerved across the Highland Park Bridge, crashed through a concrete railing and plunged 50 feet to the valley.

CHILD AIDS POLICE

Traffic was tied up after the accident for more than an hour. The grandson, who escaped with minor injuries and shock, told police the identity of the victims and enabled the officers to communicate with relatives. Shipley was a lifelong resident of Pittsburgh, having been born at the Point, and was a retired city fireman.

Pauline Blosel, 22, of 225 Alice street, died of injuries suffered when she was struck by an automobile driven, police said by Joseph Lemp, of Carrick, in Saw Mill Run boulevard.

GIRL AIR RACER TELLS OF HOP

By HELEN RICHEY

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 22.—After a good night's rest contestants in the Cord Cup air race were set for a hop off this morning for Atlanta, where we will spend the night. Everybody is in high spirits.

The derby started from Washington at 3 p. m. yesterday. Fred Dorsey, flying a Moth, was first to arrive here. Jack Mottis, who got off to a good start, ran out of gas and was forced down in a bean patch somewhere in Carolina. Betty Lund, wife of Freddie Lund, who was killed last October, is traveling with us, and at every stop puts on acrobatic stunts. She is a non-contestant.

Helen McCloskey finished fourth yesterday. Although I arrived sixteenth, I have great hopes of doing much better today. Helen and I are the only girl contestants in the race. We expect to make a real showing before the race is ended.

TWO AIR FLEETS RACING ACROSS CONTINENT

The Atlantic flight was led by Fred Dorsat of Augusta, Ga., who finished the first lap in two hours and 36 minutes, for a 270-point score.

On today's lap, the eastern group will make a noon stop at Spartanburg, S. C., and will spend the night at Atlanta, Ga. The western group will make a noon stop at Tucson, Ariz., and will have their over-night stop at El Paso, Tex.

SQUIRREL HILL HOME BLASTED

An explosion that rocked the neighborhood, followed by fire, destroyed a two-story frame dwelling at 1143 Uptegraf street, North Homestead, early today and damaged an adjoining dwelling, causing damage estimated at $6,000.

An unidentified Italian family, occupants of the wrecked house, left Thursday to visit relatives in Ohio, neighbors said.

Flames shot up through the interior of the dwelling on the heels of the explosion, enveloping the entire structure by the time firemen arrived, and set fire to the roof of the home of John Mullen, 1145 Uptegraf street.

Firemen battled for two hours before extinguishing the blaze. Two hosemen, Guy Gray and Manus Johnson, both of No. 61 Engine Company, suffered slight burns. They were treated at the scene.

ESCORT BEATEN; PROPRIETOR ACCUSED

Eight men and seven girls, the latter ranging in ages from 17 to 21 years, will be given hearings before Justice of the Peace B. L. Gunsallus in Oakmont tonight as an aftermath of a raid early yesterday on the Dickey Camp, near Hamarville. The raid followed charges of Marshall Riggs, 19, of 1204 Buena Vista street, North Side, and Helen Abbott, 17, of Sampson street, North Side, that they were attacked in the camp.

Both were in Citizens General Hospital today, Riggs suffering from a fracture of the nose and left arm, his companion with a cut on her cheek which required 22 stitches to close.

They told Patrolman Harry Lloyd, of Springdale, that they had visited the camp and were attacked in a fight a short time after their arrival. The girl accused Carl Dickey, owner of the camp, of cutting her with a butcher knife.

Lloyd, with Constable William Smoulder and his deputy, William Beck, of Harmar Township, and Constable John Biser, of Cheswick Borough, raided the camp a short time later, arresting Dickey and eight men and seven girls.

The men were held in jail at Springdale and the women at Oakmont. All were released on bail except Dickey, who was held on charges of felonious assault and battery with intent to kill and keeping a disorderly house.

MYSTERY DEATH PRIEST BURIED

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Members of St. Louis' Church, still without an explanation of their pastor's death, paid their last tribute today to the Rev. Joseph P. Cournoyer, whose body was found in his closed garage several hours after a search of the rectory had revealed the body of Miss Lavinia Moran.

Aside from disclosing that the 43-year-old priest was killed by carbon monoxide, officials declined to say what, if anything, they had found during their three-day investigation that might link his death with that of the school teacher. Even more reluctant were they to discuss whether the death of the 39-year-old teacher was due to other than natural causes.

Meanwhile in the ivy-covered church of which he had been pastor since 1919, a high mass of requiem was celebrated for Father Cournoyer. At the same time Miss Moran's funeral was held at St. Brendan's Church in another section of the city.

BRITISH CAPT. J. A. MOLLISON'S WELCOME AT ROOSEVELT FIELD, NEW YORK . . . . . FIRST SOLO EAST-WEST SEA FLIER

VALENTINE + + + By Hazel Livingston

Mother and Her Fatherless Little Girl Forced to Face Hardships

macaroni and cheese out of paper cartons marked "Palace Delicacy Store; Home Cooked Foods a Specialty" and had condensed milk in their tea instead of cream.

But Val thought their room was very nice as soon as it was fixed up with Millie's pictures and sofa pillows and the Chinese screen with the gold dragon on it was placed in front of the gas stove, washstand corner that Millie named "the bathroom-kitchen." Millie had a way of making things seem funny if they couldn't be made to seem nice.

LOOK PROSPEROUS

To see the Macfarlanes, Val and Millie, emerge from the Fillmore street rooming house any pleasant morning was to behold two elegant visitors calling, perchance to see about a cook. Surely the pretty lady and the stylish little girl couldn't live there!

True, Val's pink broadcloth coat was likely to cover a wisp or outgrown organdie that wouldn't stand another washing, and Millie's smart tailor-made that fitted her lovely figure so faultlessly had a lining that was worn to ribbons.

But Val's extravagant eyelashes, even at that early age, focused attention on her small, serious face, and Millie was clever at concocting little hats out of odds and ends of ribbon and lace. Millie liked hats. Her own were always large and expensive, and there was always a flattering fur pulled close to her rosy cheek.

"The effect is there," she'd tell Val, who was inclined, even then, to point out loose buttons and frayed linings.

The effect is there. You'd have to admit that, as you saw them sauntering down Market street, the pretty widow and the serious, big-eyed child. Leisurely looking in shop windows. Stopping to buy chocolate taffy made in a window. Boarding a street car for a ride out to the beach or the park. When Millie Macfarlane went out she left all her troubles at home.

Though they started alone, they usually came back with a gentleman.

SAILOR BRINGS GIFTS

While Val would be building sand castles at the beach or rolling down the gently terraced lawns near the conservatory park, Millie always seemed to meet someone she knew. When it was time to go home the little girl would be called and Millie would throw her arms around the slim little pink-coated figure and croon:

"You haven't met mother's friend, have you, darling? This is my little Valentine . . . Yes, really and truly . . . Yes, I did marry young."

Once in a while Millie and the gentleman would bring her to the door and tell her to be a good girl and eat her nice bread and milk and go right to bed and there would be a surprise in the morning. But usually all three dined together. Val developed a taste for filet mignon, deviled crab and lobster thermidor before she was 8.

The nicest gentleman was The Sea Captain. He brought Millie the Chinese screen and a kimona made of white silk all embroidered in wisteria, and carved things out of ivory and jade. For Val he brought Japanese dolls with different wigs to put on and take off, and once a whole set of doll furniture made out of woven grass.

"How would you like to go to Japan and see the cherry blossoms and the little children flying kites?" Millie asked one day, and Val squealed with delight, because that meant mother was going to get married at last and it was going to be the blue-eyed captain with the hard brown hands and the thin face tanned to leather by the winds that blow over the Seven Seas.

"Oh, I didn't say we were going!" Millie cried quickly. "I just said, how would you like to go? Give the man time. And Val, darling, don't ever believe what you hear about sailors being fast workers. By the time the poor dear screws up courage to ask us he'll have white whiskers and I'll have three chins."

MILLIE DEPRESSED

At the thought of Capt. Atkinson, whose lean cheeks were clean shaven and whose dark, thick hair was soft and sleek as fur, wearing whiskers like Santa Claus Val giggled. Millie laughed, too, half heartedly first, then louder and louder so that Val had to force her childish treble to keep up with her and finally she saw that Millie wasn't laughing any more, but crying.

Crying dejectedly and miserably. Crying as Val had never seen her cry before. Timidly she crept closer to comfort her, but Millie turned her back and covered her face with her hands.

"Please go out . . . and play," she begged, through tears.

So Val went out and sat on the landing and under the crack of the door came the sound of Millie weeping. She could hear it plainly. So could the landlady and the lady who roomed across the hall, who tiptoed out to listen.

But when Val spoke of it next day Millie said, "Don't be silly. I had one of my headaches, that's all. I wouldn't waste tears on him. Think I'd waste the best years of my life waiting for a man to make up his mind? Not me! Pass me the hand mirror and my powder box, will you, darling? We're going out."

They went out every day for a while, and many gentlemen came to see Millie. Val eyed them morosely. She would have preferred to wait for the captain. When he came at last, she thought he would surely invite them to go to Japan this time, because you could see he couldn't bear Millie out of his sight a minute. His blue eyes, the color of sea water, followed her everywhere, and Millie's low, bubbly laughter came back again, and they were happy.

But he sailed without them and Millie cried and called Val "poor lamb"—always a bad sign—and refused to talk about it at all.

FACE HARDSHIPS

The landlady, who had been so nice when they first moved in, was not so nice any more. She was always banging on the door and wanting to talk to Millie, and Val would have to open the door a crack and say she wasn't home, though she was, really. Hiding behind the Chinese screen!

Unhappy days. Days when they walked and walked instead of taking the street cars that whizzed by, one after the other. Days when they ate crackers and macaroni from the Palace delicacy store and Millie borrowed stamps from the janitor, who carried a little red book of them in his vest pocket, so that she could mail the letters she wrote, crying and nibbling the end of the pen.

Then, quite unexpectedly, Capt. Atkinson came back. He was thinner than ever and he forgot to bring any presents. He made one leap for Millie and flung his long, sinewey arms about her roughly and covered her mouth with his.

Val cowered against the wall, terrified. Instinctively she shut her eyes. When she opened them again they had drawn apart and Millie, all shining as if from some inner light, was holding tight to his hands.

VAL FRIGHTENED

The sea captain's eyes were wet.

"My dear," he was saying over and over, "I never knew. I never dared hope that you'd have me, with things like . . . like they are. But I'll make it up to you, sweet."

He was kissing Millie's hands. Gently, oh, so gently. "And if I'm ever free . . . Oh, Millie, Millie, I love you so!"

The child watched shyly. It was like watching some infinitely moving, never-to-be-forgotten scene in a play. The familiar, shabby room seemed to have faded away. Millie and the tall, slim figure in the rough blue coat were alone and drenched in the light.

Millie wore a long, white teagown with a great scarf of purple and scarlet. Her beautiful lips were parted, but she wasn't smiling. She just looked, with that strange, inner light shining out of her, at the captain, and the captain looked back at her.

After a long while Val began to whimper. She was afraid and she didn't know what to do.

As if with a great effort Millie tore her long, impassioned gaze from the captain and looked wearily toward the little girl.

"I forgot her," she said in a curiously flat, hushed voice.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

TRUCK DEALER SEES FALL PICKUP

In anticipation of a pick-up in business this fall, the International Harvester Company, 5200 Penn avenue, is conducting an August clean-up campaign on used trucks, according to Harold W. Moody, newly appointed Pittsburgh branch manager. He said:

"There are in sight contracts which indicate an increased demand for new trucks this fall. Business houses and contractors in general are more optimistic than they have been in the past year and a half."

Coming to Pittsburgh from Auburn, N. Y., less than a month ago, Mr. Moody has been with the International Harvester Company of America since 1910. Thoroughly familiar with hauling conditions and trucking problems in most of the eastern states, he said of Pittsburgh:

"The topography of this district makes it inadvisable for Pittsburgh truck owners to use any truck which will not insure them a maximum of durability and power on Pennsylvania's hills and a minimum of breakdown hazards. Behind each International truck is 100 years of manufacturing, testing, research and progress, and 30 years of automotive experience."

Each man or company has an individual trucking problem, Mr. Moody believes. The type of hauling, quantity and quality of load, distance and topography of the driving course should be major considerations in the selection of a truck. He continued:

"We are always glad to discuss individual trucking problems and hauling conditions for specific types of work. The first consideration of the average customer is usually service. Especially in long distance and fleet hauling, they value the assurance of service availability. Our slogan is—'The farther you go from one service station, the nearer you get to the next.'"

Harvester service stations are found in every state in the union, Mr. Moody said, in addition to thousands of dealers who can furnish repairs and supply parts. He continued:

"Our theory has always been —'A product is only as good as the service behind it.'"

TRADE METHODS UNDER PROBE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Trade practice conferences will be held by the Federal Trade Commission this fall with storage battery manufacturers and members of the ornamental iron groups. Discussion of unfair competitive methods with a view to reaching some agreements on future practices will be held.

The iron manufacturers' group will confer October 3 at Cambridge Springs, Pa., while the storage battery manufacturers will confer November 17 at Cleveland, O.

The commission's investigation into the cement industry is drawing to a close with a report to the Senate being prepared. Investigation was ordered by the Senate February 12, 1931, to determine whether activities of trade associations and manufacturers of cement or of dealers in cement constitute violations of the anti-trust laws.

Field work in an investigation of the building material industry has been completed and considerable progress made in the preparation of a report for the Senate. This investigation was apart from the cement investigation, the commission being directed by the Senate to investigate and report facts relating to the letting of contracts for the construction of government buildings particularly with a view to determining whether or not there are or have been any price fixing with respect to building materials supplied by bidders for the work.

Bond Market Advance Has Proved Helpful To Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—The market enters a new week with a period of correction behind it. Stocks in general did little last week, and idleness following their spectacular upturn is a pleasing development to many who have been apprehensive about the way the list was being whirled up. In the meantime bonds have come forward with a rush, a helpful factor. With the Hoover business conference scheduled for the end of the week, there is some stimulation ahead.

Commodities have struck a sour note all week, especially wheat. There is a strong belief, however, that the corrective movement in staple prices is nearing an end.

The amounted wanted is 250,000 shares. Perhaps it's only a trading operation, since Kreuger & Toll as a debenture bond carries only a small tax. One odd development in recent sessions has been the offering of puts on certain stocks, like Canadian Pacific and Byers Pipe, at the market.

For the time being, speculation as to the ultimate outcome of dividends like American Telephone and United States Steel preferred may well be held in abeyance. Business developments in the next month will be the all-important factor.

Wisconsin Aided By Tourist Trade

MADISON, Wis.—(AP.)—The tourist industry is the fourth largest industry in the State of Wisconsin, says E. J. O'Meara, traffic engineer of the State Highway Commission.

A traffic count indicated that an average of 19,025 out-state cars per day entered the state, with an average of 3.34 passengers.

Indiana Limestone Backlog Increases

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Indiana Limestone Company reported today that unfilled orders were 70 per cent greater than at this time last year with prospects for the remainder of 1932 favorable. Unfilled orders totaled 1,791,582 cubic feet, compared with 1,096,612 a year ago.

COPPER PRICES HOLD STEADY

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Copper continued moderately active most of the week with domestic prices steady at 5 3-8 cents to 5 1-2 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut valley. Buying was mostly in small lots for immediate shipment, but producers were not pressing the market as there was said to be an expectation of expansion in buying as general industrial activity quickens. Foreign buying tapered off further, and some easiness developed in export quotations in an effort to attract orders.

Tin quotations fluctuated narrowly, but the undertone was quite steady. World's production in July of 5,232 tons was slightly less than half of July, 1931.

Lead prices were advanced as improvement was reported in the statistical situation.

Zinc was quiet but steady, with selling pressure checked by firmness of the ore market.

Soft Coal Output Higher for Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Total production of bituminous coal during the week ended August 13 is estimated at 4,695,000 net tons, according to the Bureau of Mines. This is an increase of 230,000 tons over the preceding week, and compares with output of 6,989,000 tons in the similar 1931 period.

Anthracite output during the latest week totaled 666,000 net tons, a decrease of 94,000 tons from the preceding week, and compares with 771,000 tons mined in the corresponding week of 1931.

HAT BLOCKING AIDS FAMILY BUDGETS

In a few weeks, straw hats will be discarded until next year. Last year's felts will be brought out of cupboards and inspected for possible "wearability." This year, more than ever, they will be regarded cording to L. C. Rosen, who has been reclaiming Pittsburgh hats for 20 years. He said:

"The growing demand of customers for better materials in hats has considerably lengthened the life span of the average headgear. Combined with the current restriction of family budgets, this fact has given the work of the hat renovator a new significance."

Many hats that appear to their owners as being past reclaiming can be made to look almost new after they have been subjected to the latest methods of cleaning, reblocking and retrimming. The risk which often accompanies the average slipshod methods of inexperienced hat cleaners is not in evidence at the L. C. Rossen plant. Mr. Rossen said:

"In the last 20 years, I have made myself thoroughly familiar with the types of materials used in the manufacture of hats. Consequently only those cleaning materials which are not injurious to the texture are used. Cleaning methods are all important. Our equipment includes a series of hat blocks ranging over all sizes which insures nonshrinkage or misshape. We pay particular attention to the flanges, so that the customer may have assurance that his renovated hat will have the same shape, texture and size as it did when it was new."

Hoge Developements' Mill Nearly Ready

The mill of the Hoge Development Company, owned by Pittsburgh and California interests, will be completed by September 10, according to general manager Schiffner. The company which recently joined the list of producers of gold in the Grass Valley, California district after a blocking out and developing course of several years, has been using the Murchie Mill of the Newmont Mining Company, its neighbor and has produced 7,033 pounds of gold, which grossed $143,364 and netted the company $99,629, a gross average of $20.38 per ton. The mill of the Hoge will be of the newest type with an expected extraction of 97 per cent under the new oil flotation method.

Woodin Sees Trade Confidence Growing

BERWICK, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—William H. Woodin, president of the American Car and Foundry Company and a director of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, here for the week-end, expressed optimism today over the economic outlook.

"There is a broad feeling of confidence and optimism prevailing," he said, "as a foundation for the return of prosperity."

He said he believed the forced liquidation of stocks and properties, hoarding of currency and breaking of banks had been halted.

While he said the "panic" was over, he warned, however, that "we are still in the depression."

Rise in Leather Prices Favorable Sign, Experts Say

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Shoes may cost more next winter, in the opinion of leading dealers and brokers in hides, if leather prices continue to add to their recent gains.

Hides, it is claimed by some experts, are among the best barometers of economic conditions. From the lowest level since 1892, or around 3¾ cents a pound last June, packer hides have advanced to about 7 cents a pound today. It is said offerings are diminishing as the demand grows.

Reached Peak Following War

Hide prices reached their all-time peak at about 60 cents a pound right after the war. This was abnormal. They dropped to 7 cents a pound in 1921, recovered to between 12 and 18 cents by 1927 and, in 1928, they preceded the bull market by attaining a rate of 25 cents a pound. Hides began to sink, however, just before the bull market attained its full bloom. They were the first of the commodities to point downward. Also they were among the first commodities to show signs of emerging from the recent depression depths.

First Gains In Europe

Unlike other commodities, throughout the depression there has never been an oversupply of hides. But, as prices dropped, cattle began to grow scarce. People ate less meat than usual because of economic conditions, bought fewer pairs of new shoes and the tanners depleted their vats to such an extent they were not ready for the firming demand that came from manufacturers.

"It was inevitable that hide prices should advance, said Armand Schmoll, Jr., first vice-president of the New York Hide Exchange. "The first signs of improvement really came from abroad and soon prices in England were double those in this country."

Federal Funds Aid Colorado Workmen

DENVER.—(INS.)—Federal and state funds totaling more than $4,000,000 available for highway work in Colorado, will be utilized to assure workmen a living wage, according to Charles D. Vail, state highway engineer. Vail said that contractors would be required to specify wages and maximum number of hours in all bids for highway construction.

Bad Money Gains In Hard Times

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP.)—Bad times encourage production of bad money, says John C. Marsh, chief of secret service operatives in the South. More counterfeit nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars have been coined and passed in the past two years than in the preceding decade, he says.

NEW COAL-OIL FUEL MEETS SHIP TEST

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Experiments by the Cunard Steamship Company in the use of colloidal fuel so far have shown favorable results. The new fuel consists of 60 per cent oil and 40 per cent pulverized coal.

A. W. Perrins, Cunard combustion engineer, says the tests proved the material can be made, burned and handled in the ordinary oil fuel equipment. The new fuel is easily pumped and only slight adjustments are necessary to the heater and burner pipes.

From a technical point of view the most important result of the test was to prove that the new fuel is stable and will remain so in large quantities for three months at least. There was no slagging in the furnace, and the burners needed cleaning only twice as often as with ordinary oil fuel.

EASY TO CHANGE

The change-over to or from oil can be made at a moment's notice. The most suitable coal in Britain for the purpose would be that found in Monmouthshire, but the actual tests were made with coal from Durham and Northumberland.

The Cunard company has no intention of manufacturing colloidal fuel itself. The British government has indicated it prefers to leave the working out of the new process to private enterprise assisted by the Ministry of Mines and the department of scientific and industrial research. The ministry refused to set up a committee to consider this new fuel development specially.

LABORATORY TEST

Cunard made its first laboratory experiments in September, 1931. Later tests showed that this fuel could be burned in existing oil-fuel burning installations. Further laboratory experiments were made to determine the physical and chemical characteristics of the fuel oils which, when suitably mixed and hydrogenized, will produce stable dispersions, and larger scale tests were carried out at Wallsend.

COAL STORAGE STOCKS LOW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Stocks of bituminous coal declined during the second quarter of this year, the Commerce Department states. In relation to reduced consumption, however, the stocks were relatively greater.

On July 1 the total in the hands of commercial consumers and retailers was 26,300,000 tons, as against 27,200,000 tons on May 1, and 30,500,000 tons on April 1, the date of the last survey. Throughout the quarter, consumption exceeded production, and buyers were drawing on their stock piles.

In comparison with the like date last year, when 30,100,000 tons were on hand, the present stocks show a decrease of 12.6 per cent. At the average daily consumption prevailing in May and June, 1932, the stocks on July 1 were sufficient to last 41 days, as against 33 days on the date last year.

In addition to the stock piles of consumers on July 1, there were 4,878,000 tons of bituminous coal in storage on the upper lake docks and 1,632,000 tons standing in cars unbilled at the mines or in classification yards.

U. S. Leads World In Sales to China

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The United States supplied 27 per cent of China's imports during the first five months of this year.

Chinese customs statistics announced by the Department of Commerce showed that Japan supplied 13 per cent of the imports and Great Britain 10 per cent. British India sent 8 per cent, Germany, 6 per cent; Netherlands India, 6 per cent; French Indo-China, 4 per cent; Siam, 3 per cent, and France, 1 per cent.

During the period, 2½ per cent of China's exports went to Japan, 11 per cent to the United States, 7 per cent to Germany, and 6 per cent to Great Britain.

BLANKED BY EPPA 19 INNINGS IN ROW

IF PITTSBURGH WERE not in the National League old Eppa Rixey probably would be among the unemployed. The only time he works is when the Reds are playing the Pirates. Following yesterday's job, the venerable left-hander can now hang up his glove until September 2, the date of the next tangle between the Gibsons and the Howleys. The Reds reserve him exclusively for such occasions, and Rixey surely has made good on the special assignment. He has won only four games all year, every one of them over Pittsburgh, and the Bucs have beaten him only once. Yesterday's blank, Pittsburgh's eighteenth defeat in 21 games, was his second consecutive shutout against the Rovers in nine days. Counting the last round of the game in which they defeated him on June 24, the locals have not scored on the 41-year-old Cincinnati southpaw in 19 straight innings. In a total of 44 1-3 innings pitched against them this year, Eppa has held them runless in 38.

Eppy Rixey

Bill Swift's ill luck continues. He was the mound victim in both of the Rixey shutouts. In his last three games Bill allowed only nine runs all told, but he lost all three because the Pirates made only one run behind him. Following a streak of seven straight wins, Swift has now lost six games in a row, the first of these defeats on July 30 at Philadelphia having been the starting point of the Pirate plunge.

IT WAS FROM James E. Gaffney, who died last week, that the Boston National League club got its present nickname of Braves. Gaffney was president of the club from the middle of the 1912 season until the end of 1915, and it was because of his long connection with Tammany as a New York politician that his ball club came to be known as the Braves.

The nickname has been retained on the ground that it fits a Boston club for historical reasons, but its origin was wholly in Gaffney's political connections. The meaning of other baseball nicknames has been changed in like manner. The Cardinals, for insfance, now associated with red birds, were so called originally because the players of the club wore red caps.

ANOTHER OLD BOSTON baseball figure to die a few days ago was one of the famous first basemen of yesteryear, George (Candy) Lachance, well remembered by veteran Pittsburgh fans as a member of the Brooklyn Nationals and Boston Americans.

Lachance's last Pittsburgh appearance was in the world series of 1903, when the Pirates lost out to the Red Sox after Deacon Phillippe had pitched and won three of the first four games. George was the first sacker of the famous infield that included also Jimmy Collins, Fred Parent and Hobe Ferris.

IT WAS A change in stance that put Van Lingle Mungo back in winning form for the Dodgers and made him the pivot of the Brooklyn staff in the late pennant drive. Joe Shaute, veteran southpaw, and Otto Miller, pitching coach, collaborated in correcting Mungo's fault. "His right foot, the back one, would be pointed toward the plate when he wound up," Shaute explains. "That deprived him of important leverage. Van was coached to turn his foot just a bit, so that it would be braced against the rubber. As a result, he received better balance and an improved follow-through of his delivery. It helped his control no end and has given more zip to his fast ball."

Del Bissonette

THE MANAGERIAL JOB that Max Carey has done in making a pennant bidder of the Brooklyn club in his first year is all the more creditable to the former Pirate in view of the fact that he had to make the fight without one of the Dodgers' most valuable players

The loss of Del Bissonette for the season through an injury suffered during a volley ball game in spring practice was a hard blow to the Flatbush outfit. Replacing the experienced, heavy-hitting first baseman, always close to .300 in batting and a dependable man at knocking in runs, was a tough problem.

OLD GEORGE KELLY was brought back from the minors, but couldn't hit above .250 and was woefully lacking in speed. Joe Stripp was tried at the gateway, but Mickey Finn did not hold up in Stripp's place at third.

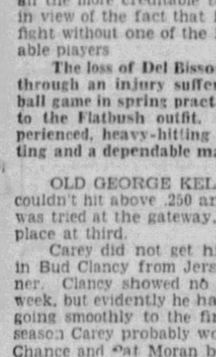
Carey did not get his infield set and balanced until he brought in Bud Clancy from Jersey City and returned Stripp to the hot corner. Clancy showed no great class in the Dodgers' series here last week, but evidently he has settled the team and may enable it to keep going smoothly to the finish. Had Bissonette been in the lineup all season Carey probably would be well out in front now to equal Frank Chance and Pat Moran by winning a pennant in his first season.

THE FAILURE OF Finland's distance runners to win several of the races which they had confidently expected to capture in the Olympic Games is explained as having resulted from a faulty training system. The Finns are clock runners. They train themselves to a given pace by running against time. This pace is supposed to be fast enough to beat the best possible time of the opponents they are to meet. The trouble was that the Finns didn't allow for the possibility that the other fellows might improve. They misjudged the time of several opponents and could not change their pace when they discovered their mistake.

THOUGH THERE WERE five other countries between the United States and Japan in the final standing of the Olympic Games, these being Italy, Germany, France, Sweden and Great Britain, the showing of the Nipponese was such that they may well be the most formidable rivals of the American forces in future Olympics.

When you have Japanese swimmers sweeping all but one of the men's events, another athlete taking the hop, step and jump, a pole vaulter clearing 14 feet, and the team as a whole ranking fifth in women's track and field, first in men's swimming, fifth in women's swimming, fifth in gymnastics, second in field hockey and fourth in water polo, it is time to consider the sons and daughters of Nippon as competitors with a great athletic future.

BEP VAN KLAVEREN, of Holland, the European lightweight champion, recently arrived, followed the same course as Isadoro Gastanaga and gave himself the right preparation for a campaign in the United States by boxing in various other countries first.



Benny Leonard

Van Klaveren has fought in Holland, Belgium, Germany, France, England, Italy and South Africa. His goal is a match for the world lightweight title, and he is willing to prove his right to it by meeting any number of American contenders. Evidently he does not lack confidence in himself.

SPEAKING OF LIGHTWEIGHT championship possibilities, Benny Leonard, who held that title for eight years, predicts that the crown will eventually be worn by Lew Kirsch. "He has everything but imagination," Leonard says. "Imagination took me to the top. A good fighter has to dream. When he dreams he tries to get there. All that Kirsch lacks is incentive." Benny has reached another goal of his own in getting a match with Jimmy McLarnin for October 3 in New York. That was his objective when he started his comeback and he will be prepared to throw everything he has left into one big effort when he enters the ring with McLarnin.

EDGEWOOD STAR SETS PACE AT FOX CHAPEL

By TOM BIRKS

Mrs. F. M. Sloan, who plays in the No. 1 position for the Edgewood Country Club team in the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania Team League, scored a 92 to pace early finishers in the qualifying test in the annual West Penn women's golf championship at the Fox Chapel Golf Club today.

Of the first 30 entrants in the big field of 140 to post scores, only four were able to break 100. Mrs. Chester Lehmann, of Westmoreland, and Miss Mary Kuhn, Pittsburgh Field Club star, shared the runner-up berth temporarily with scores of 97 each. Mrs. W. H. Duff, II., of Oakmont, followed with 99.

Mrs. Sloan gained the lead by negotiating the very difficult out nine in 47, and then making the homeward journey in 45. Her card:

EXPLANATION OF SATURDAY'S CARTOON: THE INITIALED FISH—A real fish story, and with the proof to back it up, was unfolded at the fish pier in Boston, June 29, 1932, when the Boston schooner "Juffre" of the O'Hara fleet arrived from Western Bank with a catch of halibut. M. Robert Muse, one of the crew, was amazed at the sight of the initialed halibut, recognizing it at once as the same fish he had caught two years previously. He had carved his initials on its left side and had thrown it back, as being too small for the market. The lettering, unobliterated, stands out clearly, leaving no question that the fish had remained in the same area all this time, only by some freak of fate to fall a captive to the man who originally yanked it out of its Grand Banks home.

TOMORROW: A JOURNALISTIC RECORD.

JOE WALCOTT IN HOSPITAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A heart condition has sent 60-year-old Joe Walcott, former world welterweight champion, to Bellevue Hospital.

The "Barbados Demon" of 30 years ago collapsed on the street yesterday and was taken to the hospital where the diagnosis was "arterio sclerosis and sensile psychosis."

But the aged Negro, called by many experts the greatest fighter of his weight in boxing history, is not worrying overmuch. He said:

Walcott has been living for some time in the unlighted basement of a building on West Fifty-seventh street, maintaining himself on the small sums he could pick up as a referee or an instructor to Harlem's ring aspirants.

At the peak of his form, Joe took on lightweights to heavyweights indiscriminately, although he himself tipped the beam at no more than 137 pounds. The bigger fellows were easy for him, but he often had trouble with men of his own weight, notably Kid Lavigne, Kid Carter, Tommy West and Mysterious Billy Smith.

Probably his greatest feats were his knockout of Dan Creedon, redoubtably Australian, in one round, and his technical knockout in seven rounds of Joe Choyniski, the light-heavyweight who gave Jim Corbett such a battle for 28 rounds.

Chicago Race Driver Victor in Cleveland

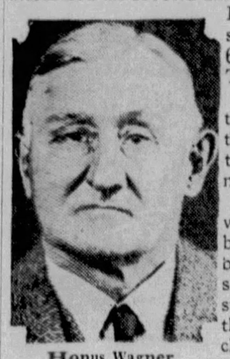
CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Gil Cunningham, Chicago Negro, won the five-mile dash at the Brook Park Automobile Speedway yesterday. Only Negroes participated.

Bo Salliea, 29, of Cleveland, won the three-mile speed sprint, the 20-mile grind and the Australian pursuit race. Wilbur Gaines, of Chicago, won the other race, another five-mile dash, and was second in the three-mile sprint.

Fans Rock With Laughter As Vets Cavort Again

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Baseball's heroes of yesteryear did their stuff again here yesterday, and although the fire and enthusiasm were still there, the old form and accuracy were missing.

Two teams, selected from more than 135 veterans who attended the second annual roundup of Old-Timers at Redland Field, battled for six innings. The final score gave Dave Bancroft's veterans a 6-to-4 victory over Eddie Roush's Old-Timers.



Honus Wagner

Al Schacht, the comedian, broke up the game by "kicking" both teams off the field and entering the pitchers' box to display what he had left by "fanning" the man at the plate.

But the fans had a good time. They whooped and howled as the boys muffed balls, threw high and wide and stole bases with seeming abandon. No box score was kept; such was hardly possible, since nearly a new team went on the field each inning to give each vet a chance to play.

Merely seeing again the famous players of the past satisfied the fans. There was Honus Wagner, one-time Pittsburgh shortstop and rated by many as the greatest of all time; Tris Speaker, who won fame as an outfielder for the Cleveland Indians; Cy Young, who sizzled them over the plate for Cleveland and Boston, of the American League, until he was past the half century mark in age; Chief Bender, ex-star of the Athletics; Slim Salee, a great pitcher in his day; Jimmy Jones, Dave Bancroft, Claude Berry, Grover Hartley, Peaches O'Neill, Nick Altrock, the comedian, and many others who helped swell gate receipts.

Seventy-four-year-old Gus Shallix, who pitched for Cincinnati; George Strief, 76, of Cleveland and St. Louis, and Eugene Baker, 84, who swatted 'em for Live Oaks in the 70's decided they didn't want to test aching joints, and looked on from the grandstands.

PHILS BUY HURLER

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Purchase of Pitcher Clarence Pickerel from the Fort Worth club of the Texas League, for delivery next spring, has been announced by Gerald P. Nugent, business manager of the Philadelphia Nationals. Pickerel is 21 and a right-hander and, until injured recently he had won six of 11 starts.

Mrs. Hill Choice To Retain Title

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City, opens the defense of her women's Western Golf Association championship today on the Peoria Country Club's difficult course.

Mrs. Hill, paired with Jane Weiller, was first away in the qualifying round which will reduce the championship field from more than 100, to 32. The Kansas City star yesterday went around the layout in 83 strokes, seven over women's par, and was favored to retain the title.

ALEKHINE KEEPS LEAD

PASADENA, Cal., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Four out of six games have been decided in the sixth round of the international chess masters' tournament. Dr. Alexander Alekhine, of Paris, drew with Samuel Factor, of Chicago, but held the lead. Herman Steiner, of New York, Harry Borochow, of Los Angeles, and Samuel Reshefsky, of Chicago, won.

DOUBLES PLAY ON TODAY

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The outstanding tennis players of four nations, the United States, France, England and Japan, will try to prevent Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn from retaining their National doubles championship during the week of team play that opens today at Longwood.

Allison and Van Ryn, who hold most of the world's important doubles titles, and are the Davis Cup champions, top the American seeded team. The foreign list is headed by the great Frenchman, Henri Cochet and young Marcel Bernard. Cochet last appeared in this tournament four years ago.

The other outstanding American teams are Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, who defeated the 1931 champions in the Newport Casino doubles final; Gregory Mangin and Berkley Bell, runners-up in last year's National play, and the Frank Shields and George Lott combination.

Seeded behind the front team are Henry W. (Bunny) Austin and Frederick J. Perry, of England; Jiro Satoh and Takeo Kuwabara, of Japan, and another British pair, John S. Olliff and Ted Avory.

There is such a wealth of tennis stars in the fifty-first annual doubles play that it will open without an outstanding favorite team.

Bob Lowe Retains Fairmont Title

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Aug. 22.—Bobby Lowe retained his White Day Club golf championship yesterday by defeating Johnny Warsh, White Day pro, in the final of the annual tournament, 3 and 1.

Lowe, who also holds the Fairmont Field Club championship, will defend that title this week, meeting Este Moore. The date for the match has not been set.

Lowe was strong with his drives yesterday. On the No 2 hole on the second round, Warsh missed a six-inch putt and thereafter was off his game. He was 2 up on Lowe at the time.

FORMER LEADER EAGER TO GET FRANCHISE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Giants having hit their stride in the stretch, Bill Terry, John McGraw's successor in the leadership of the team, will be continued as pilot of the club for 1933 unless the franchise is sold by the stoneham interests. McGraw is reported to be connected with an Indianapolis syndicate which may purchase the club, and in that event, the doughty leader might wish to resume active management under a system which would give him full authority in running the team.

Although McGraw is said to have stepped out of the picture on account of ill health, it is now known that the Stoneham-Tierney clique had the Little Napoleon's back to the wall. More than one big deal, the Sun-Telegraph learns, was transacted over the head of the long-time manager.

NO VOICE IN DEALS

The Grimes-Aldridge trade put over by the Giants and Pirates was one of the first signs of the times in regard to McGraw's loss of the power. A few minutes after the deal had been completed, this writer called up Grimes and notified him of the trade.

Grimes was swept off his feet. He had just finished a big year for McGraw and the New York leader was keen for him when the swap came out of a clear sky. Burleigh hinted at the time that he felt McGraw had no part in the transaction and now it is known that officials other than John J. put through the deal with the Pittsburgh directors over the long distance telephone.

The Hornsby - Hogan - Welsh trade of the Giants and Braves was another deal completed without McGraw's sanction, it is reported on reliable authority.

HUSTLE FOR TERRY

Terry has the Giants playing headsup baseball; he is setting a fast pace at bat and in the field and Bill's spirit also is a fine thing. He was painfully hurt in the last game of the dual bill on Saturday, but he refused to leave the game and his courage was rewarded with a victory.

Eppa Jeppa Rixey scored his fourth triumph of the season over the Pirates yesterday as the Buccos bowed in Cincinnati to the Reds. The score was 2 to 0. Rixey has no other victories to show for the season, but the Rovers are a pushover for him.

Bill Swift worked a four-hit game, but the clever young right-hander had to suffer another very distasteful setback. Swift has pitched brilliantly in his losing streak; in fact, his slab work is as convincing as it was when he was winning, the difference being the Buccos are unable to cope with lefthanders.

Rixey made a single in the third that started the drive that brought the only runs of the game. Grantham walked and Crabtree bunted safely. Two long lofts to the outfield scored the big pitcher and Grantham. The Buccos left nine runners on the bases. The defeat dropped the Bucs four games below the Cubs.

Cub Stars Fined For Abusing Umps

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—John Heydler, president of the National League, has imposed $100 fines on Charley Grimm, manager, and Guy Bush and Woody English, of the Chicago Cubs, for creating a row during the game with the Phillies Saturday at Chicago.

The players protested a play and are accused of using such language the umpires complained.

Italy's Ring Stars Box in Chicago

WES FERRELL HANGS UP TWENTIETH WIN OF SEASON

CHICAGO GAINS AS DODGERS, BUCS LOSE

Associated Press

Wesley Cheek Ferrell, tall, husky North Carolinian, has chalked up his twentieth victory of the season, the first pitcher in Major League history to win 20 or more games in his first four full seasons in the big leagues.

The Cleveland right-hander won 21 games and lost 10 in his first full season with the Indians, in 1929; won 25 and lost 13 in 1930, and 22 and 12 last year.

His twentieth triumph of the current campaign was gained yesterday over the Washington Senators, 11-8, in a loosely-played game in which 15 passes were given. Ferrell went the route, although he was walloped for 11 hits and gave six walks. Brown and Edelen, Senator hurlers, handed out nine free tickets.

YANKS BOOST LEAD

The New York Yankees stretched their American League lead to 10½ games over the idle Philadelphia Athletics by beating the St. Louis Browns, 3-1. Each team made only three hits, but the Yankees bunched all of theirs in the third inning for two runs.

Detroit and Boston split a double bill. Bob Weiland permitted the Tigers only four hits in the opener which the Red Sox won, 3-1. Vic Sorrell limited the Sox to seven blows in the second battle and won, 4-2.

Chicago's Cubs strengthened their hold on the National League lead, beating the Phillies, 2-0, while their closest rivals, the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates, both were beaten.

The Cubs had the benefit of four-hit pitching from the sensational rookie, Lon Warneke, who hung up his eighteenth victory of the season.

DODGERS BEATEN

Three Dodger pitchers were pounded for 17 hits as the New York Giants whipped Max Carey's pennant hopefuls, 9-3. Eppa Jeptha Rixey, 41-year-old left-hander of the Cincinnati Reds, tamed the Pirates for the fourth time this season, scattering eight hits in a 2-to-0 victory.

The Boston Braves battled 14 innings to achieve a 7-to-5 verdict over the St. Louis Cardinals and then darkness halted the second game of a scheduled doubleheader with the score tied at 2-2 in the sixth.

Slattery Battles Belanger Tonight

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Jimmy Slattery, former Buffalo light-heavyweight contender, and Charley Belanger, of Winnipeg, open the week's sparse and uninteresting National boxing program with a 10-round bout in Buffalo tonight.

New York City and Seattle offer the only other attractions of the week. Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, recognized as featherweight champion by the National Boxing Association, engages Lew Feldman, of New York, in a 10-round non-title bout at the Coney Island Velodrome Thursday night. At Seattle on Friday, Billy Townsend, Vancouver welterweight, will face Fred Steele, of Tacoma, in a six-rounder.

Field Club Star in Title Quest

BARBARA WARMCASTLE

Charming Pittsburgh Field Club champion, who is expected to make a determined bid for the West Penn women's championship in the tournament under way at Fox Chapel today. Anjeannette Hunter, of the Oakmont Country Club, is the defending champion. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

S. PARK NET PLAY OPENS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The first annual Allegheny County Recreation Bureau novice net tourney gets under way on the six clay courts at South Park today. With performers numbering in the neighborhood of 150 listed for men's singles action and correspondingly sizable group billed to compete in the feminine division, exceedingly busy time of it lies in store for Superintendent William S. Haddock, Chairman Henry Blum, Supervisor C. E. Forrest and their aides between now and conclusion of singles festivities Saturday.

Doubles play will be reserved for next week, due to the unprecedented flock of entries in the individual sections.

STARS ENTERED

Man-to-man skirmishing got under way at 8:30 o'clock this morning. Among leading contestants are such well and favorably known racqueters as Russ Unger, Mt. Lebanon captain; Ralph Bald, Pittsburgh Center junior champion, and Bob Grier, runner-up to the same honor; Bill Blum, veteran, Riverview Park ace; Dick Creighton, Olympia mainstay; Elmer Artzberger, youthful South Hills driver; Bill Purcell, Duke varsity aspirant; Oscar Saperstein, hard-hitting Bridgeville hope; Bob Meyer, North Side satellite; Henry Ackerman, Rockwood luminary and former Harvard Cup interscholastic titleholder; Don Dixon, likewise a Rockwood light, and John Bald, Roy Heckler, Bill Fay, Kin Darragh and Harold Hatch, recent seekers after the junior laurels copped by Ralph Bald.

Unger, whose splendid tennis as boss of the Mount Lebanon team in the R. T. A. Inter-Club League race the past several seasons stamps him one of the keenest netmen in the Steel City district, looms as odds-on favorite to romp off with the men's singles crown.

WESTMONT PLAY CARDED

Meanwhile there looms at Westmont, just atop Johnstown, the beckoning torch of the yearly Southern Pennsylvania championships. It is likely that the half-dozen Pittsburghers—Billy O'Loughlin, Bob Lampus, Eddie Alcorn, Bud Leyda, Andy Smeaton and the writer—who last week jousted in the Wheeling Park invitation milling under the genial auspices of "Bunny" Corcoran will aim to take in the South Penn affair.

George Henderson, husky Stanton Heights flash, lately returned from seven weeks of tournament activity in the British Isles, also figures on making the Cambria trek and it is possible that Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. crack and captor of the Western Maryland flagon earlier this month will add his presence to the troupe, while Miriam Sullivan, Winged Head feminine shotsmith, may join the quest for the women's singles cup.

The tennis tourney sponsored by the Emerson Club, of the Sacred Heart Church, East End, gets under way today on the club courts. The finals will be played next Sunday afternoon.

Bob Lampus, former Harvard Cup interscholastic titleholder, returned from a jaunt to the Wheeling Park invitation net tourney last week precisely in time to capture the North Boroughs closed men's singles crown at expense of Emerson Morcroft, ex-Dartmouth luminary, in straight-set windup contest at Ralph Park, Saturday, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. The victor's severe service and strong driving game proved too much for the chopping style of the Hanover product, and the issue of the tussle was in little doubt after the early stages. Lampus defeated Gilbert Morcroft, University of Virginia ace, 6-4, 6-2, while his rival in the final was disposing of Witherspoon, Westminster College racqueter, 6-1, 6-1, in the same bracket.

Hugus and Selby Cop Doubles Honors

WHEELING, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Wright Hugus, of Wheeling, veteran of many tennis court battles and former State Senator, and Fritz Selby, Ferry (O.) druggist, won the doubles championship of the second annual Wheeling Park invitation tennis tournament yesterday.

Their 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 defeat of Howard Friedrichs, of Wheeling, and James E. Allen, Jr., captain of the Davis and Elkins College tennis team, closed a full week of play.

36 GET CALL FROM DUKES

By JESS CARVER

Just one week from tomorrow, the first tri-state varsity football squad, Wash-Jeff's President array, will shove off on its preliminary training campaign, leading the remainder of the field to the gridiron wars. The day following, Duquesne's 36-man varsity squad, augmented by a freshman turnout difficult to number definitely in advance, opens practice on the Bluff.

The Dukes are starting out earlier than any Red and Blue squad in history, due to the fact that the boys have a ball game on the books for the night of September 16. That evening they engage Westminster at Forbes Field under the lights. The week following comes the initial tough assignment of the campaign, the struggle with West Virginia, also listed for Forbes Field.

36 ON SQUAD

Following is the varsity squad, headed by Capt. Paul (Smoke) Abele, of Johnstown, that will report to Coaches Layden and Bach:

PRESIDENTS READY

Next Tuesday, though, Leroy (Hank) Day returns to his Alma Mater after 16 years of highly successful tutoring at Washington High School, will greet a squad of 22 lettermen and a dozen sophomores at College Field, Washington.

Day's system of football, built on deception and speed, may look forward to receiving the acid test its first year, for the Presidents play seven of their nine games away from home, and number among their opponents Bucknell, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Lafayette, Detroit, Marquette and West Virginia.

The Tipoff

Bob Smith, co-captain-elect of the Carnegie Tech varsity basketball team, has returned to his home in Dover, O., after having spent two weeks here in Presbyterian Hospital, where he underwent an operation.

Bob Markowitz, now of Clarksburg and former Fifth Avenue High School all-round star, who played end and guard for Cam Henderson at Davis-Elkins during the past four years, has been signed as athletic coach at Wallace (W. Va.) High School.

By JAMES MILLER

The heavyweight championship of the district is at stake (with onions), and it's up to Frank Novak, of the North Side, and George Panka, of Homestead, both claimants to the title, to settle that question. This they will endeavor to do when they meet in the 10-round main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale.

Panka won the distinction of being the best big fellow around these parts a few years ago by defeating all the local opposition, but since that time none has challenged him. But now along comes Novak, who knocked out Tiny Powell in his last showing at Hickey Park, a contender for the synthetic title, with the intention of pushing George out of the picture. That means that Bunny Buntack's man from Homestead will have to put on full steam to derail Novak's quest for the honors.

BIG BOUT LOOMS

Buntack turned down an offer for Panka to meet Isadoro Gastanaga, the latest "find" among the heavyweights, in New York, in order to sign for the Novak bout, but claims that the offer still holds good if George wins tonight.

A fine preliminary card has been arranged by the promoters. In the six-round semi-final, Patsy Hennigan, of Clairton, a stablemate of Novak, with a string of nine straight knockouts to his credit, is in with a newcomer to these surroundings in Joe Marcus, formerly of Seattle, Wash., but now of Braddock. Marcus may be a new name to local fans, but to some of the best fighters out West—well, to them his name is bad news. Marcus holds victories over Denver Mickey Cohen, Wildcat Carter, Tommy Cello and Don Frazier, among others.

CLEMENTS MEETS JENNINGS

Lloyd Clements, of Jeannette, a good puncher, tackles Ray Jennings, Negro light-heavyweight, of Homestead, in the second bout, which has promise of being a knock-'em-down-drag-'em-out affair.

Al Farrone, of the West End, whose ring destiny is guided by Gus Camp, boxes Jerry Clements, brother of Lloyd, in the opener. The show will start at 8:45 p. m., Daylight Saving Time.

Between Rounds

Matchmaker Jules Beck, of Greenlee Field, is having trouble lining up a main bout for the show scheduled for Thursday night. He'd like to use Tommy Freeman and Paul Pirrone, but hasn't yet been able to put the bout in. He also is considering using Jackie Wilson against Frankie Goosby, the Cleveland Negro middleweight. For an opening bout, he has signed Curley Klaas, who has a string of 17 of his victims by knockouts, for his record as an amateur, with Jack Smiley. Klass will turn pro in this bout.

The Amerita Club, a local Italian organization, reports high interest in the coming of Italy's Olympic boxing team here next week to meet the pick of the local amateur mitt slingers.

Entries are pouring in fast for the open amateur boxing tournament at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., August 31 to September 1, according to Eddie McEntee, president of the club.

MYERS WINS RACE

Nick Altrock
Baseball's Humorist
Says:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—When it comes to exceeding your quota, how about Johnny Frederick, of the Brooklyns?

Nick Altrock

John has had that thrill that comes once in a lifetime four times already this season. It consists of going up as pinch hitter and smacking out a home run.

The average pinch swatter is about effective as John and Ethel Barrymore would be as half the Four Marx Brothers. Most managers figure they get an even break when a pinch hitter strikes out. Because they can always hit into a double play. All of which makes Frederick's feat stand out.

There's only one greater thrill in baseball than pinch hitting a homer. That's making an umpire change his decision by giving him a dirty look. The last time that feat was accomplished was at Valley Forge in 1777.

HELEN JACOBS COMPETING IN NATIONAL NET TOURNEY

After five years of trying, Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., has captured the women's national tennis singles title. She defeated Carolyn Babcock, young California star, in the finals of this year's tourney at Forest Hills yesterday and took the crown relinquished by Helen Wills Moody. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

HELEN JACOBS WINS CROWN

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Helen Jacobs, the comely Californian who has answered to "Queen Helen II" almost since she can remember, today occupied the women's tennis throne relinquished by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody.

With her long-time nemesis safely in Europe completing her art studies, Miss Jacobs finally crashed through to the title yesterday with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over little Carolyn Babcock, of Los Angeles, in the final of the National event.

Black-haired Carolyn, who had proved a sensation by eliminating Mrs. L. A. Harper and Joan Ridley on successive days, collapsed almost completely in the final and offered the weakest kind of opposition after her service was broken early in the initial set.

By way of making her long-awaited success complete, Miss Jacobs paired with Sarah Palfrey, of Sharon, Mass., to win the doubles championship from Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter, of Dedham, Mass., 8-6, 6-1. Again it was Helen's flashing racket that made the victory possible.

Although she failed when her big moment came, Miss Babcock made an impression on the tournament that will not soon be forgotten, and the critics today already were predicting a championship for the diminutive 20-year-old scrapper before she is through with tennis. She was the darling of the gallery the last three days and there was genuine disappointment that she had to lose, even as there was rejoicing that Miss Jacobs finally had climbed the heights.

The new champion, now 23, takes the big cup home on her fifth attempt. She had played in four previous events, reaching the finals against Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in 1929.

CASTING KINGS ARRIVE HERE

Four champion fly casters were among the early arrivals in this city this morning for the opening of the national fly-casting tournament, which opens at Carnegie Lake, Highland Park, on Thursday morning.

Among the notables already registered in the city are Charley Edwards, world's champion accuracy bait holder; Bob Clarkson, all-round champion, holder of the world record for ⅝-ounce accuracy bait tossing; Leo A. Kob, all-round Ogden Park champion, and Fred M. White, who held the ½-ounce distance championship in 1927 and 1928.

All hail from Chicago. The quartet of champions held a workout at Forbes Field this morning in preparation for the tournament opening on Thursday.

Miss Holm Signs Long Movie Contract

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Warner Brothers First National studio said Eleanor Holm, of New York, holder of the women's world record in the 100-meter backstroke swim, had signed a seven-year picture contract.

The studio said it would not endeavor to cash in on Miss Holm's swimming prowess by casting here in a mermaid role, but would try to place her in a conventional part, believing that her beauty and general bearing would justify such action.

Miss Holm, who once declined a place in the Ziegfeld Follies to continue her swimming career, will be given a six months' course of dramatic training before she is featured in a picture, the studio said.

EARLY HOCKEY VERDICT IS ASSURED

By CARL W. SHATTO

The fate of Pittsburgh hockey, insofar as the 1932-33 season is concerned, is to be determined at the meeting of the National Hockey League opening at Montreal today.

Art Rooney, North Side politician and well-known sportsman, has announced the reaching of a terms agreement with local banking interests now in control of the Pittsburgh International League Club, whereby he is to take over the Yellow Jackets in the event the National League does not veto a continuance of International League hockey here.

CONTROLLED BY NATIONAL

The National League has controlled Pittsburgh hockey territorial rights since National League hockey was introduced here several years ago, but Roy D. Schooley was permitted to present the International League brand here when the Pittsburgh National League franchise and players were loaned to Philadelphia.

Rooney and James Egan, of Boston, associated with him in the hockey venture, fear that the National League may decide to return National League hockey to Pittsburgh.

Elmer Whitehill, many times mentioned as the man to whom the Yellow Jackets might be sold, is out of the city. It is understood that he is in Montreal representing the local banking interests at the National League parley, and that he is working for the furtherance of the deal with Rooney, rather than in his own behalf.

READY TO GRANT LEASE

Officials of the Philadelphia Company, owner of Duquesne Garden, the home of hockey here, have announced that they expect to lease the arena for hockey this week, and Charles S. King, of Windsor, Ont., president of the International League, has promised a statement regarding the Pittsburgh hockey situation at the termination of the National League parley.

The Mississippi River divides the country for this event in which 10 high western shooters compete against 10 high eastern marksmen.

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—John Takash, 23, of Sharpsville, was instantly killed while making his first run as an automobile racer at the Sharon Speedway yesterday.

CARRIERS LEAD STOCK PRICE ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The stock market resumed its advance, under leadership of the rails, today.

Traders were encouraged by the drying up of selling late last week, and the cheerful tenor of week-end trade surveys. Bull forces succeeded in getting the list back to within striking distance of the peak levels of the recovery, touched nearly a fortnight ago. Advances of 1 to 4 points appeared throughout the list in moderately active trading.

The share market and some of the principal commodities, notably cotton, moved forward together. Cotton reached new highs for the recovery, and wheat acted better. The conclusion of the Ottawa conference, at which it was tentatively agreed to favor Canadian and Australian wheat over the American product in England, failed to have any particularly bearish effect upon that staple.

While some quarters in Wall street had expressed uneasiness over publication of the detailed information on loans of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the action of the markets indicated that Wall street generally felt no serious harm could be done, in view of the general improvement in sentiment throughout the country.

Rails were helped considerably by Saturday's report on freight car loadings for the week ended August 13, which showed an increase of more than 16,000 cars over the previous week, of which a substantial portion was accounted for by the movement of miscellaneous merchandise, which was accepted as a good sign. Santa Fe, the first of the largest trunklines to report for the week ended August 20, showed some recession, at 22,712 cars, compared with 24,610 in the previous week, but insufficient evidence was at hand to indicate what next Saturday's report for all class 1 carriers would show. Chemicals were old up in response to improvement in the textile industry, which is one of the largest users of heavy chemicals. Du Pont's rayon making subsidiary, furthermore, announced a 10-cent-a-pound increase in prices of important rayon yarns.

Wholesale Prices React Slightly

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Wholesale prices as measured by the weekly index of the National Fertilizer Association during the latest week lost a small part of the large gain of the preceding week. During the week the index number declined two fractional points, receding from 62.3 to 62.1. The latest index number is one full point higher than it was a month ago. It is 2½ points higher than the record low of 59.6 reached on June 11, 1932. A year ago it was 67.5. There has, therefore, been a decline of only 5.4 points during the latest 12 months. During the preceding 12 months there was a decline of about 9 points.

Omaha's Livestock Market Threatened

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 22—(AP.)—Omaha, second livestock market of America, today was threatened with blockade by Iowa's striking farmers.

Leaders of the Iowa movement, encouraged by their success in stopping milk shipments by truck into Sioux City, announced that at 2 p. m., today, a picket line would be drawn across the two main highways leading into Omaha from Iowa.

Within 48 hours, they hope, shipment of livestock and farm produce into Omaha from Iowa would be stopped.

MANAGEMENT REVIVED TO END SLUMP

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Taking advantage of the wide-spread psychological improvement, management in the large, after lying down for a long dismal period, has again began to function.

A new phase of a gigantic experiment in pitting human determination and intelligence against the chaotic forces of blind nature has been reached. The creation of the $50,000,000 Commodities Finance Corporation is the latest move in a co-ordinated effort to stage a "managed recovery." The new corporation is an improvised implement for getting the excess reserve funds of the great New York banks, which have been unproductive, out into the provinces, where presumably credit facilities are less ample. It is a gesture for extending the benefits of the reflationary campaign of the Federal Reserve System beyond the banks into the hands of ultimate users of credit.

Mr. Rukeyser

HELPS RURAL BANKS

This new instrument is a further result of the deliberations of the Young committee of six bankers and six businessmen, who have been operating in the New York district, to find ways and means of making the enlarged credit supply available to those who need it.

Apart from technicalities, it is obviously hoped that the new corporation will help to convince buyers and sellers that the bottom has been reached and passed in commodity prices. As a backstop for banks the new corporation is doubtless intended to give country banks more confidence to lend on commodities at prevailing deflated levels. Another thought of the sponsors is that mills should be encouraged to stock up on raw materials.

If the campaign succeeds, surpluses on hand will appear less ominous, because the rate of using them up will be quickened. In past recoveries, shortages have habitually been uncovered. Stocks on hand that seemed excessive while the panic psychology choked the channels of distribution soon become less unwieldy as businessmen, with confidence returning, show a willingness to build up depleted stocks, and put in normal inventories.

SENTIMENT BRACED

The chief whoopee thus far has been in the speculative markets. In business itself, midsummer dullness has prevented any significant change in total economic activity since the beginning of July. The automobile industry is momentarily flat. Some manufacturers are shutting down for the inventory period. Such indicators as electric power production, car loadings, department store transactions and life insurance sales are still way down. Ingot production continues unchanged at 14 per cent of capacity.

But the barometric signals reflect the change in sentiment. The Bureau of Labor Statistics July commodity price index was up one per cent over June, making the first gain since last August.

PERMANENT STEPS NEEDED

The climax of the "managed recovery" campaign will come next Friday when selected business men will meet with President Hoover at the White House. In view of the fact that the depression is primarily the breakdown of a planless system, it is curious that integrating machinery has been designed for emergency only.

W. E. Woodward, in his forthright new book entitled "Money for Tomorrow," describes the depression as "the result of the chaotic confusion of our economic arrangements—an enormously dynamic industrial machine, the most powerful and the most complicated in the world's history, running without direction."

An intelligent minority, including H. I. Harriman, of Boston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, recognize the need for permanent machinery for industrial planning and economic co-ordination.

General Tire Sets Half Year Record

AKRON, Aug. 22.—Unit sales of tires by the General Tire and Rubber Company in the first six months were the largest in the company's history for an corresponding period, and were 17.6 per cent above the first half of 1931, the previous high record, according to William Oneil, president. The General Tire factories are working full time.

Du Ponts Advance Rayon 10c a Pound

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Du Pont Company has raised prices 10 cents per pound on 75 denier and 100 denier yarns. Other leading producers are expected to follow.

WALL STREET HEARS

That total August automobile production will be a little lower than that of July.

That the first substantial increase in copper demand will probably come from the electric power companies.

That a number of the leading railroads could show substantial increases in net income, as result of modest gains in gross, in view of drastic operating economies.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Railroad issues again dominated the bond market today as various speculative loans added from 1 to 3 or more points to their previous gains. United States and foreign government obligations were somewhat dull but steady.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 00 omitted in sales column. United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars:

CRACK FIELD SEEKS WESTERN GOLF TITLE

ROCKFORD, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Young Don Moe, of Portland, Ore., felt the Sword of Damocles dangling over his head today as a record crowd of 200 golfers opened assault on his prized Western amateur crowd over the Rockford Country Club battleground.

It was by far the largest and probably the smartest Western field in 32 years of play and the champion knew he was in for a stiff week's struggle to be the first to successfully defend his crown since the veteran Charles (Chick) Evans, Jr., of Chicago, turned the trick back in 1922 and '23. Three former champions, two Walker Cup team members and a host of rising young stars from all sections of the nation, extending from Oregon and California to Georgia, were grouped in the championship field as the battle opened for qualifying berths.

Moe was sure of only one thing—a place among the 32 qualifiers, who will fight it out all week over the match play route for the title, one of the most elusive in golf. As champion, he automatically qualified. His rivals must play 36 holes, 18 today and as many tomorrow, to join him.

One could pick his most dangerous rivals almost at random from the bulging list of entries, but several stood out. Among them were Gus Moreland, of Dallas, trans-Mississippi champ; Johnny Lehman, of Chicago, 1930 western titleholder; Evans, himself on the comeback road; Charley Seaver, Los Angeles, Walker Cup team member along with Moe; Keefe Carter, of Oklahoma City, 1925 champ; Barry Eigheiberger, Los Angeles, second low qualifier for the 1932 national amateur; Warren Dawson, of Chicago, twice Illinois state champ, and 19-year-old Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, who beat the better-known Johnny Goodman for the Nebraska state amateur title last week by clipping six shots from par.

Seaver's final move before going into the battle was to equal the competitive record for the course, shooting a 33-33—66. His putting was deadly, and his long game indicated he will be one of Moe's toughest foemen.

SEXTON SETS RECORD

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Leo Sexton, of the New York Athletic Club, bettered his unrecognized world shot put record yesterday with a toss of 52 feet 11¼ inches.

Sexton, who won the Olympic championship with a heave of 52 feet 6 3-16 inches, was competing with numerous other Olympic athletes in a track and field exhibition before 50,000 persons in the Municipal Stadium. The exhibition was offered free by the Mayor's committee for entertainment of the city's unemployed.

The stadium track, rough, hard and bumpy, caused the stars of the recent international athletic classic plenty of trouble, but Jesse Owens, young Negro high school junior of Cleveland, ignored the poor footing to race to a spectacular victory in the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds.

His time was all the more remarkable in that it was made on a curved course and the two foreigners he vanquished in the final, Erick Brockmeyer, of Germany, and Gabrielle Salviati, of Italy, hunted up interpreters to extend lavish praises. Brockmeyer asked the Negro youth to send him a picture.

Bill Miller, Olympic pole vaulting champion, and William Graber, the former titleholder, took turns clearing various heights until they reached 13 feet 6 inches. Then they yielded to the cries of feet smarting from continual landings on the unsoftened baseball diamond and mutually agreed to call off the contest.

Johnny Morris, the Louisiana hurdle star, repeated earlier victories over Lee Sentman of the Illinois A. C., by breaking the tape in 14.6 seconds, another creditable performance on a curved track. Carlini, of Italy, was third.

Jack Harris Wins Michigan Net Crown

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Jack Harris, Chicago, yesterday won the Michigan Riviera tennis championship, defeating Harold Kaplan, Detroit, 8-6, 6-3, 6-3 in the finals of the seventh annual tournament.

Mrs. William B. McIlvaine, Chicago, won the women's title, defeating Helen Grawn, Detroit, 6-1, 6-2.

SIMONS WINS PARKS TITLE

The 23-year-old Kentuckian, playing his third year in the tournament, gave 34-year-old Ted Drewes, of St. Louis, four-time champion, a lesson in tennis yesterday in the final of the men's singles at Shawnee Park here. The scores were 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Simons reached the semi-finals in 1930 and the quarter finals in 1931 before being eliminated. Drewes won the men's title in 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927. George Jennings, Jr., of Chicago, won the championship last year and in the three preceding years, was unable to compete this year on account of an injury.

Other winners in the tenth annual tournament are: Men's doubles, Gordon Braudt and Carl Ireneus, of Chicago; women's singles, Helen Germaine, of New York; women's doubles, Mrs. Virginia Ducker and Mrs. Ann Lindermann, of St. Louis.

Blondie Discovers She Can Walk Again When Larry Returns for Her

CHAPTER XXV.

The heat and noises, the dust and odors still poured up from the tenement streets into the McClune flat, but it now had an atmosphere that it had not known for a long, long time. True, the old place was stripped of all the presents Blondie had given her family during her hey-day in the Follies, but there was something that more than took their places in the dingy rooms. Blondie was home. Her cheerful smile, her resonant voice and her loveable personality permeated the whole house.

Seated in her father's old chair, her legs propped up on pillows and covered with a blanket, she was listening intently to Gert reading from a theatrical trade paper.

"New Find in the Follies . . . Wow Girl Picked Up in Automat . . . New Blonde Promises to Panic Them Along the Main stem . . ."

Gert paused and looked at Blondie. They both smiled significantly. Gert started to put the paper down.

"Go on—read it . . ." said Blondie. But before Gert could pick up the paper Pete burst into the room.

"Where's my hat!" he called cheerfully. ". . . where's my coat! How can any of you expect me to get off to work in the morning without a little assistance! Don't you know they're waiting for me!"

Gert rushed for the hat and coat. "Here you are, precious!" she said lovingly as she held the coat for him, then followed him out into the hall.

"Well, there's a silver cloud to every lining!" said Blondie, laughingly. "At least Pete's come to life!"

BLONDIE DETERMINED

Ma McClune came in from the kitchen, went directly to the table beside Blondie's chair, and looked carefully over a tray of dishes sitting there.

"Hm-m-m-m . . . nice appetite," she said very much pleased.

"Hm-m-m-m . . . nice food! Nothing like your cooking, Ma!" Blondie watched her mother go out with the tray. Then she closed her eyes rather wearily. Gert noticed it.

"Gee, Blondie, you've got to get away. Why don't you let Pratt do something for you?"

"I told you, Gert, it's not the life for me . . . I walked away from it once and I don't want anything from it now. Anyway, it's sort of a promise—to Pa."

"Once a sap—always a sap!" said Gert with affectionate reproof. Then, afraid she had hurt Blondie's feelings, she said quickly, "Never mind, kid; you'll get well and go to work again; sure you will."

"They're right—I know . . ."

"Don't worry, kid—I'm here—we'll wrangle things somehow." . . . She rose quickly and went to the window to hide her tears. She looked down into the street. Suddenly she exclaimed wildly:

"Blondie! He's down there!"

"Who? The doctor?"

"No. Your friend, Larry Belmont."

"Larry! What's he doing down there?"

"I guess he's coming up to see you."

"You didn't let him know . . ." Blondie was alarmed.

"Cross my heart."

"Not a soul!"

"Oh, I can't see him . . . I can't!" Blondie cried with a little catch in her voice.

Gert hurried from the window. "Let me fix you up—maybe you can get him back . . ."

"But I couldn't have him back—not now . . ."

"He's stuck on you, Blondie . . . he'll be all broke up when he sees you like this . . ." as she straightened the scarf. ". . . Now's the time to hook him, kid!"

As she spoke there was a sharp knock at the door. The two girls looked at each other excitedly. Then Gert hurried to the door.

"Hello!" he said, entering the door, and then he saw Blondie.

"Why, Mr. Belmont!"

"Hello, Larry!" forcing a gaiety she did not feel. She held out her hand. He grasped it in both of his and, still holding it, dropped into a chair at her side.

"Toodle—oo! I'll be seeing you," said Gert as she went out.

But neither of them heard it. Holding her hand, Larry looked at her tenderly. Blondie returned his gaze, outwardly calm and a bit disinterested. But she was clinching her teeth to keep back the tears. With a mighty effort she managed to appear casual and slightly amused.

"In Paris?"

"Very."

"Why?"

"You know why."

"Oh . . ." Blondie could trust herself to say no more. It was harder than ever to fight back the tears now.

Larry glanced down at her legs. "When are you going to be strong enough to ankle up the aisle with me?" he asked, trying to make light of a serious moment.

"Don't be silly." Blondie was laughing bitterly—but her heart was breaking.

"I said don't be silly." She said it so icily that Larry drew back.

"What do you mean?"

"You really want to marry me?"

"Why not? I don't want anything else. Love's a precious thing in life; it's like lightning—it never hits twice in the same place. Oh, Blondie, we're lucky!"

"Speak for yourself, Larry," she said, as cold and hard as she could, with a note of scorn and bitterness. ". . . that love stuff doesn't seem to ring the bell with me—the only time I was in love it hurt like the devil . . ." she was laughing, strange hollow laughter. ". . . now that I'm over it . . ."

HARSH ANSWERS

"Just that, Larry. I'm sorry . . ." she answered harshly.

"Never was more serious in my life," she laughed sarcastically.

"Well, I guess I can take it."

"I did." Blondie clinched her teeth.

"You must be kidding," said Larry, convinced, yet hoping against it.

"Kidding nothing—you're pretty conceited, Larry, but thanks all the same," said Blondie, still laughing coldly.

"I've had many a sock on the nose—but I must say this almost floors me." He was trying to be facetious to cover his embarrassment and hurt. He got to his feet.

"I know how easily you can forget," said Blondie, handing him the theatrical paper. "They've found a new blonde for the Follies."

Larry threw the paper down angrily. Without a word he turned and walked out. As the door slammed tears were streaming down Blondie's cheeks. She was at the breaking point, ready to let herself go completely when suddenly a great sense of peace and quiet came over her. Quite calmly she realized that she had done the right thing—marriage was an impossibility for her now, and she looked down at her crippled legs. Then the thought of her old pa swept over her.

"Did I make good for you—Pa?" she said softly, smiling through her tears.

Suddenly she threw the scarf and blanket off her legs. With great effort she struggled to her feet. Holding to the table, she stood quietly for a moment. Then, by the aid of chairs, the table, the rickety old buffet, she managed to stagger to the window so she could watch him drive down the street . . . away from her . . . out of her life forever.

She looked down into the street, and saw Larry talking to Gert. Suddenly he turned and almost ran back into the tenement house. Panic seized Blondie. Gert must have told him, she thought, and he was coming back out of pity for her! She must get away from him . . . hide from him.

She staggered across the room and into the hall. Wildly she flung open the entrance door of the flat. Her only thought was to escape—to run away from Larry—to hide. She started up the stairs, as she heard him running up from below.

"Blondie!" Larry called as he reached the door of the flat. Then, seeing that it was open, he stopped suddenly. He turned and saw Blondie struggling up the stairs. He rushed to her, catching her in his arms.

"Blondie!"

She broke into hysterical laughter and tears. "The doctors said I couldn't walk . . ." she cried.

"You little liar! So you were going to send me away, were you?"

"But I can walk—I can walk!"

"You'll never be able to walk fast enough to get away from me again . . ." he said grinning broadly.

"Okay, mister!" said Blondie, laughing.

"Mister yourself!"

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh Grantland Hears About Madge's Daughter

I rarely have been more grateful than when my young daughter sent her tempery-baby wail into the air so that it reached the little veranda table where Hugh Grantland had just sat down to breakfast at my bidding.

"Oh! has no one told you?" I cried: "But, of course, there has been no time for anything, and I am proud to give you the news myself. "That is the voice of Miss Faith Graham, who came to us this summer. She evidently is in a temper. Because of a combination of circumstances—this wounded Chinese, taking Katherine's time, and a play that had to be finished for Mr. Veritzen, taking all of mine—she has been under the care of her grandmother for a time, and a more thoroughly spoiled young person you could not hope to see. I 'deeply sympathize' with Katherine when she takes over her care again."

"A little daughter—yours!" he said slowly. "I don't know—I can't—I never thought—Tell me," he burst out suddenly, "does she look like you? But she must!"

"Of course it is impossible to tell yet," I said, smiling, "but everbody tells me so, of course. That's the proper thing, you know, with a first daughter."

"When may I see her?" he asked, and there was something in his voice, urgent, appealing, that impelled me to a quick decision, voiced without considering the consequences.

"In 15 minutes," I said, rising, "if you will wait here for me."

GOES TO CHILD

He was on his feet, but he did not demur with the perfunctory politeness an ordinary guest would have used.

"If I will wait!" he repeated. "Oh! thank you!"

His tone, said "Hurry! hurry!" and I turned and went swiftly into the house, then more slowly up the stairs, as there came thoughts of the difficulties in my path. How could I either explain my errand to my captious mother-in-law or gain her consent to my taking the baby downstairs?

"Well! I'm glad you're up," she said as I spoke from the doorway. "I'm just about worn out with this child."

"And I am rested," I said. "I came right up as soon as I heard her. I am all through breakfast. What do you want me to do?"

I was careful to make no suggestion. That would have been fatal to my plan, for Mother Graham showed characteristic irritation even at my question.

"Do!" she repeated. "I should think any woman with an atom of common sense would see what there was to do. Quiet this baby, someway. You're fresh. She'll probably quiet down if you take her, I'm so nervous and tired myself that I've probably made her nervous. Here!"—she suddenly put the now screaming baby in my arms—"see what you can do with her. I'm going into my room to lie down for awhile. Don't let anybody call me. I'll ring when I want my breakfast."

INFANT QUIETED

Her voice was imperious, but her face was drawn and her movements dragging as she went out of the door. I guessed that she was reaping the harvest of the seeds she had stubburnly sown in taking care of her granddaughter according to her own methods, and that the baby had kept her awake much of the preceding night.

I was guiltily conscious, however, that I was not as filled with sympathy as I should have been, for her fatigue had played marvelously into my hands.

With the perversity of infants, Faith stopped yelling almost before her grandmother was out of the room. Hurriedly I sponged her tiny body, dried and powdered her rosebud flesh and put her into one of her prettiest little frocks. Then I stole downstairs with her, listening at every step for my mother-in-law's dreaded summons.

But she evidently had gone straight to her bed, for I heard nothing, and I went undisturbed to the little side veranda.

Hugh was pacing up and down its narrow confines, but when he saw me he stopped short and looked at me—a long, steady gaze before which my own eyes dropped.

"Please!" he said, unsteadily, "don't move for a little. And—won't you look at me?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Saturday was another "red-letter" day in the lives of those club members attending the Enright Chapter meeting for the hour between 11 and 12, noon, which is given over to club members at the Enright was one filled with activity and excitement.

Immediately after the theater opened and the club pledge had been recited in unison, by the Grand Jester and club members, the girls were called upon the stage to engage in their regular Saturday morning dancing class and limbering exercises under the direction of Ruthie Miller and Dolly Fritz. The ability demonstrated by the youngsters indicates bright futures for many of them and we hope that they may all become stage and screen stars of the first order.

At the conclusion of the dancing school, Bill Eiseman and Johnny Smith, acting as captains, selected two teams of 11 men each and engaged in a strenuous "tug-o-war" which was won by Bill's boys. The sides looked evenly matched, but the "tug" was a one-sided affair from start to finish. Bill's staunch supporters pulled like Trojans and the spoils were theirs without a serious threat of losing.

CHALLENGE BOYS

The girls, yelling like a college cheering section, loudly voiced their opinion of the boys and challenged them to another struggle, boys against the girls, but due to a prearranged program their contest will be held next week at the regular Saturday meeting. However, the girls were in for a tough time so they engaged in a "poison game." After much energy had been expended and many lungs fully extended in cheers one young lady, Ruth Rieck, emerged the winner by a close margin and was awarded a lawn croquet set. Now she is envied by all the other girls and they will not rest until they too have croquet sets.

After the girls had tired themselves the boys having rested up from their exertions in the "tug-o-war" all entered into an elimination contest and obstacle race. The entire group of boys were first entered in a sack-race in teams of 10. Fifty eager boys took part in the contest and the five winners, one from each team, entered the obstacle race. What a race . . . several in their eagerness to be the victor forgot the rules of the contest and had to make a new start which cost them much ground in the race. It was still a close contest and hardly anyone knew who would win until they came into the final stretch. The winner, a young man with fiery red-hair whose name we cannot recall, was the proud and smiling recipient of a brand new and man-sized penknife with two real steel blades.

Far from exhausted by the fun-filled hour both the boys and girls were ready for further excitement, but it was time for the regular performance, and they returned to the auditorium. And thus another Enright meeting came to an end, but there will be many more, so if you are not already a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theater Junior Komic Club enroll now and attend the regular Saturday meeting at your nearest Warner Brothers Theater.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

Let us relax for a moment and see what lesson can be gained from the above picture. In the first place, it shows that the Eskimos are smarter than anyone suspected—they have perfected a machine to brush the teeth. But is it really smart? Is it wise? What has the machine done for these people? Go to the Far North. Look around you. Do you see any dentists? No. They've been driven out by the machine. No dentist is needed in a land where people annoy themselves with their own rotating drill. No dentists; no waiting rooms. No waiting rooms; no old magazines. No old magazines; no old jokes. No old jokes; no new jokes. No jokes; no laughter. No laughter; no need of gold teeth. No gold teeth, no romance. No romance; no—but why go on?

The Blue Law Condemned

The adoption by the American Legion at its state convention of a resolution calling for the repeal of the Blue Law of 1794 is important as showing that the demand for a more tolerant attitude towards Sunday amusements is not confined to the large cities, but is state-wide.

The Sun-Telegraph proved by a postcard poll that the people of Allegheny County are 5 to 1 in favor of a change. Similar sentiment was disclosed in Philadelphia. The lawmakers from these cities have accordingly been, with a few exceptions, favorable to repeal. It is the country Senators and Representatives that have stood in the way.

Our poll showed that in the rural sections of Allegheny County, where conditions are much the same as in the agricultural regions elsewhere in the state, the farmers were just about as desirous of the repeal of the Blue Law as the city dwellers. They, too, wish to be able to go to ball games and movies on Sunday. They, too, can see no harm in indulging on Sunday in innocent entertainment which is perfectly legal on other days of the week.

The American Legion resolution, coming, as it does, from a body composed of delegates from all parts of Pennsylvania, rural as well as urban, fairly may be taken as representing the general sentiment of the people.

The resolution was to the point in stating that the open violation of the Blue Law tended to create a lack of respect for law and order.

This antiquated repressive statute, so out of harmony with the present spirit of the people, should be erased from the statute books at the next session of the Legislature.

The Relief Outlook

The Prospect for Taking Care of the Unemployed Satisfactorily Is None Too Bright.

While developments of the last week improved the prospect of the community's being able to take care of the unemployed satisfactorily, the outlook is still none too bright, and much remains to be done before it will be safe to say the situation is well in hand.

Sixteen thousand families in Pittsburgh are dependent on charity because of the unemployment of the bread-winners, and there is an equally large number of dependent families in the county outside of the city.

Notwithstanding that the city now has available for relief purposes the $800,000 realized from the sale of bonds and that the county has available $200,000 appropriated by the Board of Poor Directors, it is said to be impossible to give a family of five more than $3 a week for its maintenance. How a family of five can manage to live on such a sum is beyond comprehension.

The Legislature's appropriation of $12,000,000 for relief is pitifully inadequate. The city of Philadelphia, in desperate financial straits, has been counting on state aid to feed its 50,000 destitute families; it reports that its share of the Legislature's appropriation will amount to less than 7 cents per day per person.

Gov. Pinchot has again appealed to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a $45,000,000 loan for relief purposes. The corporation's criticism, in refusing to grant Pennsylvania's first application for federal aid, that it had not done all it could to help itself, no longer has the force that it had when first made.

It is earnestly to be hoped that the authorities at Washington will now come to our rescue. Otherwise there will be much suffering next winter.

A Fair Question

The People Are Entitled to Know If Utilities' Employes Are On the Investigating Committee.

Gov. Pinchot has asked a fair question in calling on members of the Senate committee which is to investigate the public utilities to say whether or not they are employed by utilities companies as attorneys or in any other capacity.

Lawrence C. Hickman, counsel for A. A. Chapman, who furnished much of the information that led to the resignation of W. D. B. Ainey as chairman of the Public Service Commission, has been quoted to the effect that five or six of the members of the investigating committee are employed by utilities companies. One of the Senators, said to be an attorney for the Reading Railroad, has since resigned from the committee. It is reported that Senator Rial, the chairman, is an attorney for the Baltimore and Ohio.

The committee's attitude has created the impression that it is friendly to the utilities companies and resents the fact that charges of corrupting members of the Public Service Commission have been brought against some of them. The committee's action in seizing upon Ainey's resignation as excuse for dropping its investigation of the charge that he let a public utilities official pay an expensive hospital bill for him plainly showed unwillingness to bring the facts before the public.

Hence it is no more than just that the people should know if the investigators are themselves connected with utilities companies.

If the members of the committee remain silent the suspicion that a "whitewash" is planned will be strengthened.

A Presbyterian Citadel

Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania Continue as the Banner Presbytery and Synod.

Those who think the church is losing its grip would do well to examine the annual statistical review of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, issued today by Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, stated clerk of the General Assembly. It shows a net gain in membership during the year of 10,744. The denomination now has 2,009,875 communicants, the greatest number in its history.

The Sunday schools of the denomination have also scored gains and Dr. Mudge reports an enrolled membership totaling 1,624,402, the largest on record.

These figures are of special interest to Pittsburghers and Pennsylvanians, because this city and this state remain the strongholds of Presbyterianism. Pittsburgh Presbytery, with 68,111 members, is by far the largest in the country; and Pennsylvania is the banner synod, with 371,012 members, as compared with 264,810 for New York, which is second.

The strength of Presbyterianism here can be traced to the Scotch-Irish settlers of that faith who founded Pittsburgh and other Pennsylvania communities, particularly at this end of the state. Their influence is felt to this day.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Money—The Home Wrecker

When you see two nice, normal, intelligent people facing each other in the divorce court, you may be fairly certain that the history of their troubles could be written on a greenback, and that the villain in the case is Old Dollar Bill.

* * *

Of course, there ARE jealous wives and stepping husbands, flirtatious women and bullying men; but the world is not made up of villains and villainesses. Most people are pretty decent fair-minded human beings, who marry because they are very much in love and intend to stay married.

But, there are 57 varieties of ways in which money and the money problem can menace, spoil and wreck a marriage. For one marriage that is wrecked by infidelity or bad temper or nagging, there are 99 shattered by INCOME—patibility.

* * *

Sometimes it's the man's money and sometimes it's the woman's money. Sometimes it's too much money, and sometimes it's no money at all. And, sometimes it's just the battle over who shall spend the money—and HOW!

* * *

Many a couple who would have stuck along happily together, all their lives on a forty or fifty-dollar-a-week salary, have started taking separate roads, the moment they could afford two automobiles.

Many a woman who would cheerfully have gone on, forever, cooking her husband's three meals a day and filling his dinner pail, if he had never made his pile, has been so bored to death, lolling around expensive winter resorts, while he was engrossed in business, that she has turned to a gigolo for diversion, and gone via the Reno-route.

* * *

That's what too MUCH money does to marriage. But too little money has its dangers, too.

* * *

Many a man who would have been a charming companion and a jolly pal, given an easy mind, has become a nervous, irritable, dyspeptic grouch, after a few years of office grind and worrying over his bills and debts. And many a girl who might have been a sweet, placid, pretty wife, if she had had a good home, some pretty clothes and a few simple pleasures has turned into a nagging, soured, sharp tongued drudge.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and Marshall Nielan called, as gay a harlequin as I know. And Earl Carroll dropped by to carry away a fine painting bequeathed by a mutual friend. So at my daily dither, and to sit with my mother-in-law in the brave sunshine, quaffing a jorum of lemonade.

Through the town, meeting that valiant war horse, Jack Curley, and on to Jean Dalrymple Morehouse's to meet my wife. Neal Andrews and his fair lady, Dorothy Hall, there; also, Florence Speed and Vicki Baum. Then, for a spin through the park, and to the Claremont for dinner.

In the evening, to a cinema and amused especially at the nonsense of J. P. Medbury and, later, picking up Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson and carrying them to the St. Regis. To bed betimes, and read Gilbert Frankau's "Christopher Strong," movingly and beautifully writ.

Some one digs up an old theatrical program of William Faversham's starring vehicle, "The Squaw Man." Six of the original cast became as famous, and far wealthier, than Faversham himself. The list included: Theodore Roberts, William S. Hart, William Boyd, George Fawcett, Mitchell Lewis and William Haines.

* * *

During the Faversham era, the haunt of distinguished players was the lounge of The Players in Gramercy Park. In those days, a pony of brandy was eight cents and there was hulabaloo when the House Committee, in casual dicta, raised it to nine. So mighty was the protest, the old price was restored. Incidentally, it seems to me that in the gallant modernizations, The Players, more than any other institution in New York, preserves a fine excess of its pristine charm.

While everybody was absent from the apartment a few hours, there is an indication or so that someone tried to pry in. Had whoever it was succeeded, it would have been a grand laugh on the dogs. The Boston is aroused only by a shaking, and the Sealyham is one of those ferocious beasts who rushes in mad barks at strangers as a prelude to licking their hand.

Some time ago, I trailed in the wake of Judge Samuel Seabury for several blocks along the avenue. He seems enamoured of decorum, tradition and austerity. One could never bet he never was called "Sammy" in his youth. Only one other person I ever saw suggests such a stand-offishness—that was the elder J. P. Morgan.

* * *

The senior Morgan was the most difficult of all Wall Streeters to interview. Many times he was surrounded near his fortress at Wall and Broad. In such contingencies, he naively discarded his archdeacon manner and graciously invited the reporter into his bailiwick and, through the labyrinth of corridors, to a certain office. There he would hand out an expensive cigar, excuse himself for the moment. And that was the last ever seen of him.

* * *

In aimless wander today, I passed the site of two furious high spots of other years. One was the old Cafe Beaux Arts at 41st and 6th, long a spot for gourmets hungering for peches flambees and frog legs provencale, and still carrying on. Texas Guinan began her hostessing there. The other was 39th street's Bustanoby's, now a memory. Here was the collegiate's Saturday night paradise, from which they often went directly to chapel with thumping heads. No caper was too outlandish. I recall one after-midnight when a group appeared gravely carrying, in the manner of a casket, a medieval chalet filched from a suburban backyard. Just as gravely, they placed the cabinet particulaire upright in the middle of the dance floor, and around it they marched and marched. Even the orchestra caught the spirit, switched from a turkey trot of the day into a funeral dirge. Such spurts of jocundity never were unusual at Bustanoby's, on a Saturday night. One wonders what's become of the good gray Jacques, toddling about with white-rabbit innocense as though fearfully shocked. But actually enjoying it more than the rowdiest campus cut-up.

* * *

In those days, cafe life consisted of singing and dancing, and that interlude called "rest period." And, after all, the great shearer. Time, leaves us something. I no longer sing and dance. But can I rest period!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I watched him playing solitaire the other night.

Queer experience. There he sat—a smart and successful man, with power and wit enough to battle his way out of any jam. A man who need never be trapped by the crookedness of others or the weakness in himself—

YET EVERY LITTLE WHILE, WHEN HE DIDN'T THINK I WAS WATCHING, HE'D CHEAT AT SOLITAIRE!

Shift the cards, just a little, until they lay to his advantage. And then beam and boast when he won.

A curious sight. It set me thinking. I've heard lately that this man is beginning to slip—that people are beginning to find some strange flaws in his performance.

AND I WONDER IF THAT ISN'T BECAUSE HE CHEATS AT SOLITAIRE!

For, of course, he's playing solitaire all the time. Not a solitary game with a deck of cards—but a game of life, in the secret places of his own heart.

A game with his own character—

A game in which he's both dealer and player—

AND WHAT DOES HE DO IF HE DOESN'T LIKE THE HAND HE DEALS HIMSELF?

Does he face the facts frankly? Does he acknowledge that he isn't holding a Royal Flush or a Full House? Does he admit that, at times, he's only a couple of deuces?

OR DOES HE MANIPULATE THE CARDS UNTIL THEY SUIT HIS EGOTISM?

Does he refuse to face himself as he really is? Does he refuse to judge his acts for what they really are? Does he "pretty up" things with a lot of high-powered excuses and slick alibis? Does he, in short, cheat at solitaire?

I'll bet he does.

And I'll also bet that that is why he's slipping.

For that's why most of us slip in the game of life.

It isn't because someone else has stacked the deck against us—IT'S BECAUSE WE STACK THE DECK AGAINST OURSELVES.

We won't admit we're holding weakness. We refuse to see that there is danger ahead.

WE KID OURSELVES INTO BELIEVING THAT THINGS AREN'T WHAT THEY ARE.

BUT WE WON'T ADMIT TO OURSELVES THAT WE HOLD THOSE CARDS.

We say that other people don't understand us. We say we really love to work—only we've never had a good chance. We say we're really amiable—it's the other fellow who is irritating. We say that we "meant well" even if we did seem to be mean or silly.

SO WE CHEAT AT SOLITAIRE. WE FIX UP THE DEAL UNTIL IT SEEMS TO BE A WINNING HAND.

But sooner or later, life will call our bluff.

The Tragedy of Charles Phillips

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

In these days when bench and bar are much the objects of attack, many unfair things are being said. The wholly untenable idea is being planted in the minds of men that there is something disreputable in a criminal lawyer defending in the courts a client he knows to be guilty. It is forgotten that every man, guilty or innocent, has the right to his day in court. Also that where a man is guilty of a capital offense and he admits his guilt the court will not permit him to dispense with the advice of counsel. If he employs none, the court assigns one. Even the guilty is entitled to all the protection that the laws throw about him.

But years ago in England a distinguished lawyer got in trouble by acting vigorously on the misrepresentations of a client in a murder case, and, in defending him, seeking to throw suspicion on another. The lawyer was honest about it. He believed it. But after the evidence was in the client confessed to the lawyer he was guilty.

What could the lawyer do under the circumstances when it came to the argument? He did not know. And he did the proper thing. He went to the judge, stated the facts, and asked for instructions. The court advised that he could not desert his client at that stage and should argue his case on the evidence. The lawyer was Charles Phillips.

J. P. Curran Was His Idol

Few today have ever heard of this remarkable Irishman; and yet I have in my library an aged volume published almost a century and a quarter ago containing the speeches of Phillips. That was when Phillips still was young. He was to live many years after the publication, and there were to be no more volumes. For something strange happened to him.

As a young man in Dublin he was conceded to be one of the most promising of men. His idol was John Philpot Curran, greatest of the forensic orators, greatest of the wits and conversationalists, most convivial of men. And Curran was interested in the promising young man. He had him frequently at his country home, "The Priory," near Dublin at the brilliant dinners attended by the brightest minds of England and Ireland. When Curran died the young man in three weeks dashed off the very interesting volume of reminiscences of the great genius; a book that lives and may be found in public libraries in America today. It has the weaknesses of haste; the brilliancy of genius.

Joined Fight for Catholic Freedom

When, later, Daniel O'Connell launched his fight for Catholic Emancipation, Phillips enlisted for the war. He was a valuable ally for O'Connell and Shiel, since he was a Protestant. There were thousands of liberal Protestants who thought the civic discriminations against the Catholics were relics of savagery, such as Curran, whose mother wanted him to be an Episcopalian minister, and Plunkett, whose father was a fashionable Protestant minister in Dublin, and Grattan. But few of these Protestants were better equipped for services on the platform than young Phillips. O'Connell put him to the fore and on one occasion when a great group of Catholics were preparing to petition Parliament for civic rights the great Daniel assigned to Phillips the task of preparing the petition.

On the platform, as before juries, he was brilliant. He had an enormous vocabulary, and was a master of over-rich rhetoric. He had the imagination of a poet, but was given to too much embellishment. There was logic and sound reason in his arguments but he adorned them so with the flowers of speech that it was not so easy to follow the reasoning. He delivered some great speeches in the courts and some outside. His article on Napoleon and his speech at St. Denis Isle on Washington are admirable in every way.

But he was spoiled by too much praise when he was young.

His Speeches Scored by Press

The best evidence of this is the publication of his speeches before he was thirty. They had made an impression on great crowds. He had magnetism and an impressive delivery. The sincerity of his crusade for justice won him great hordes of friends and admirers.

But the speeches transmitted to the printed page seemed exaggerated. There were mistakes in taste. There was conceit in their very publication. And all this laid him open to the ridicule of the critics who had no sympathy with his views. These were the dominating influence in the English magazines and papers. They turned upon him with jeers.

Move to London Ended Career

I have often wondered why he left Dublin for London. He was the friend of the greatest leaders of Irish opinion and politics and he had been successful in the Irish courts. Had he remained in Ireland, fought to the end with O'Connell, gone to Parliament as one of his party, sobered down in his style with age, he might have developed into one of the great leaders of a national cause.

When he uprooted himself to settle in London it is not improbable that he was misled a little by his exaggerated opinion as to his status. He was not long in discovering his mistake.

Politically he was through.

In his profession he turned to the criminal practice and became a member of the Old Bailey Bar. His clients were no longer patriots guilty of political offenses, but criminals, burglars, murderers. The public seldom was interested in their trials. In the end he was little better than a police court lawyer.

Lost Prestige By His Action

The hub-hub growing out of the case referred to in the beginning, with the investigations and the controversy, did him no good. He had done nothing that was wrong; he had followed the directions of the court; but it hurt him. No longer was he so much the admired companion of the great. He lived to be an old man and probably got but a line or so of obituary when he died; for while his speeches are to be found in a single volume with those of Curran and Grattan, his name does not appear in the Encyclopoedia Britannica.

That volume of speeches tells the tragic tale of lost opportunity.

His Career Just One of Tragedy

On the site of the Old Bailey where he practiced in London is a new court house and next to it once stood the old prison whence some of his clients passed to the scaffold erected in front in the street. Across, and near by, is an old church. In this church, in a glass case, one may see what seems an old fashioned dinner bell. It has a story.

An eccentric religious character, with money, conceived the idea of having a hireling appear before the windows of the prison at midnight preceding the day of an execution and ring the bell with the mournful message to the doomed man within—"The fatal day has dawned. Prepare to meet your God." When the eccentric died he provided in his will for carrying the ghastly notion on. Finally it was abandoned and the bell is relegated to the relics.

The curious still visit the bell; there is no curiosity about Phillips. I have often thought he would make a good subject for a novel—a tragic novel.

The Rhyming Optimist

BY ALINE MICHAELS

Day's End

And oh, how sweet
To know a friend
Waits now to greet
Your weary tread,
Your tired eyes,
With meat and bread
Of Paradise!

With bread of love
How doubly dear
Toil's end must prove!
At the day's end.
When spent and worn,
To know a friend
Your loss has borne;
Felt your care's sting
Day's end must bring
The best of life!
